Thursday 24 May 2018

Good afternoon, Felicity! I hope you are well and your weather in Vancouver is much cooler than it is here in Texas. We are in the 90s already, which is hot, but the worst is yet to come: 100-degree weather is forecast starting next week. Oh, wonderful! Three to four months of triple-digit highs is so much fun.

[Lately the weather has been quite cool (knock on wood).]

Here is a two-fer loc, or, as they have sometimes been called, a Lloyd Penney-style loc because he frequently covers multiple issues of a fanzine in one letter of comment. The two issues under consideration this time are numbers 527 and 528 of BCSFazine, the April and May issues of 2017. We are getting there!

[I have a Lloyd Penney two-in-one LOC in this issue!]

Dave Haren writes—in #527—about reading an Ace Double from 1966, and the way he phrases it sounds as if the book had just been published. Once again, I felt like I had slipped into another timestream, but thankfully my imagination brought me back to reality. At any rate, having one of those stories be by Avram Davidson (Clash of Star-Kings) is always a winner, and John Rackham (Danger from Vega, in this case) was a fine writer, too. I just checked my catalog and see that this particular Ace Double is one I do not have. Oh, well. It's not the only one I don't own, but I am always on the lookout for more Ace Doubles. My collection of those is almost a full shelf long.

Lloyd Penney's letter makes me a bit jealous of his wife Yvonne's retirement. I am very happy for her, and hope she enjoys herself. For that matter, I do hope that Lloyd and Yvonne can make it to England next year. In fact, if they time it right, the Dublin Worldcon sounds like a great benefit to add to that trip. I have no idea if they are planning that into their budget, but if they do, then Valerie and I can spend time with them in both England and Dublin! Wouldn't that be lovely, hmm?

Before I switch to the May 2017 issue, I think Michael Bertrand's little story "Long Night's Dreaming" was nicely done. I normally don't read fiction in fanzines, but this was short and sweet. Like I said, Michael told the story well, and that is not easy to do at really short lengths.

Okay. In issue #528 the only thing that really stands out for me is Taral Wayne's closing comments about former Canadian Prime Minister Harper. Taral doesn't tell me anything new about Harper, but he does reinforce how much I really like and prefer Justin Trudeau as PM. Heck, I really thought his father Pierre was a wonderful PM, which shows to Goya how old I am. May I suggest you people keep Justin Trudeau in office for another six years or so? Speaking for a lot of sensible Americans, we like him. A lot.

Thank you again for sending the fanzines my way, and I will be sure to get the new Askew off your abode Real Soon Now.

All the best,
John Purcell

Dear BCSFen:

Thank you for more issues of BCSFazine, 528 and 529. Fast words for both coming right up, after this disclaimer...not only did we celebrate my 59th birthday yesterday, and our 35th wedding anniversary on May 28, but we also were vendors at Anime North, and at a small craft show. We are partied out!, so I guess writing locs is a relaxation I need.

528...Our public utility, like telephone, has become magical because most people don't know how something like this really works? Like many politicians these days, they rely on our ignorance to automatically set a high price. Gotta keep those greedy shareholders happy, I guess.

Fortress America in the Trump era...I notice that when our PM responded to the new tariffs Trump imposed on all of its allies, the world's press covered him, and he regained some of his lost lustre. I am waiting for him to say that the tariffs imposed on America in return aren't fair. I can't help but think that Xi and Putin saw that with such a fool as Trump running for the presidency, they could make a move on American democracy, and I think they were surprised when it worked. I hope the American courts disagree with Trump when he says he is the law, and cannot be made to cooperate with any investigations.

Yvonne is retired, but wanted to save some extra money for our impending return to England in 2019, so she took a short-term assignment at a health administration company not far from home. She got some extra cash, but hated every moment of it. I guess she truly is retired, but may take the summer off to enjoy it, and may return to the workplace in September.

The Passages column: There are some names I recognized, but I was sorely disappointed to see Leo Baxendale. He was the creator and artist for many of the cartoon strips that appeared in the great British comic book The Beano, and I grew up with those comics. My grandparents in Scotland would send The Beano and Dandy to me, and then The Hotspur and Wizard when I got older.

We may never know how destructive Steven Harper was, but the electorate, when it can be moved to actually vote, does have a short memory. In a few days, those of us in Ontario will find out if Doug Ford (ugh) may become the next premier on Ontario. He's been nicknamed Trump Jr., and I can see why.

[By now we know how that turned out. Scary.]

529...I see I must check out Project Gutenberg again. It's been a while since I downloaded a ton of stuff to read on my old Palm Pilots. I now have an Android tablet, but I am not about to buy anything new.

I admit I didn't know about the death of Douglas Netter, producer of Babylon 5. I admit we will never see more from the B5 universe, so we might as well just enjoy all of the existing canon. I wish I could get my hands on more of the novels, for they are considered canon as well. Elena Verdugo had her best role as Marcus Welby's secretary. I have officially dated myself.

I see the deadline for the Aurora Awards has passed. I hope lots of people have participated in this, but my time has passed. We haven't participated in some years now.

[Readers: See "News-Like Matter" for this year's ballot.]

Done for now, and continuing with the pile of zines that formed in a short time. Looking forward to the next one!

Yours,

Lloyd Penney

WCSFA Announcement: Photo and Video Contest

Win a free membership to VCON 42 (Oct. 5–7, 2018) and a first printing of our first fundraiser anthology by sharing your photos and videos.

WCSFA is a non-profit association registered in BC, Canada that hosts events for fans of science fiction, fantasy, games, costumes, and popular culture. Examples include VCON, a literary-focused fan convention; Nothing But Games (NBG), a digital and analog gaming convention; and Northwest Fan Fest, a media-focused fan convention.

WCSFA is currently on the hunt for photos and videos from previous VCON events, and who better to ask than our wonderful members and past VCON attendees? We would love to see photos and videos from costume contests, dances, book launches, panels, and anything else you might have.

If you have attended any previous VCON events from any year and have photos and videos that you want to share with us, you have a chance to win one of two VCON memberships for 2018 plus a first print-run copy of our fundraiser anthology, coming later this year. You get one entry to the contest for every usable photo and video you send.*

We're accepting submissions for the contest starting immediately until June 30.

If you don't have any photos or videos from past VCON events, don't worry! You can still enter to win a free membership. Send us a short video (less than two minutes) telling a story or talking about what you love about VCON or what you like to geek out about when attending fan-run conventions like VCON.

Please send submissions to contests@wcsfa.org with the subject line "VCON Photo/Video Contest" with attachments. If the attachments are too big to send via email, please put them in a Google Drive folder or other sharable cloud location and send us a link to the folder.

* Note that submitting your photos and videos constitutes permission for the photos and videos to be used in marketing materials for WCSFA and VCON.

WCSFA Announcement: We Need Your Used Books!

We need your used books!

We're organizing a used book sale fundraiser and need books to sell. Can you help us out?

Do you have books sitting on your shelves that you've read and that you'd love to find a new home for? Or how about books lurking in your to-be-read pile that you probably aren't going to read?

We want your used books!

We are planning a used book sale as a fundraiser for WCSFA and the events we do. But we need used books to sell.

What We're Looking For

We're looking for books that will appeal to our community! Books must be:

- In good condition (i.e. no torn pages or water damage)

- Any genre of science and fantasy fiction (e.g. space opera, urban fantasy, high fantasy, alternate history, paranormal romance, horror, space western, and all the other subgenres of SF&F!)

If you're one of our local authors we'd also be happy to accept copies of your books that you might care to donate, with or without signatures.

Where You Can Drop Off Books

Book donation locations include:

- The first Wednesday of every month at the WCSFA board meeting in New Westminster. Contact Jenni Merrifield, the WCSFA president, at president@wcsfa.org for the address.

- During PopUp Bookshop events (see below).

- Alternate drop off locations can be arranged by contacting Andrea at bookshop@wcsfa.org.

Where Will the Money Go?

In an effort to keep the cost of WCSFA events (like VCON) lower for our attendees, we will be doing more fundraising efforts like this. All the funds raised by the used book sale will help offset the cost of event operations.

When Is the Book Sale?

- PopUp Bookshop—Abbotsford: Saturday, August 25 from 11 AM to 8 PM at Highstreet Mall in Abbotsford.

- PopUp Bookshop—VCON: October 5 to 7 at VCON 42/Canvention 38 in Richmond.

- PopUp Bookshop—New West: TBA (details are still being organized).

We are also on the hunt for more free or low-cost venues to use for future book sales. Know of one? Email bookshop@wcsfa.org.

Press Release: Strange Fictions Press Releases New Arthurian Urban Fantasy

Strange Fictions Press launches the release of the first installment of Jacqueline Church Simonds' exciting new Heirs to Camelot series. Titled The Midsummer Wife, this Arthurian urban fantasy is sure to please fans of contemporary and romantic fantasy.

With a release date of Midsummer Day 2018—June 24, 2018—The Midsummer Wife follows a near future when the reincarnated souls of King Arthur, the wizard Merlin, and an anxiety-ridden pagan priestess must save Britain. Facing the destruction after a devastating nuclear attack on London, they must conquer an old foe: Morgaine.

The descendants of Britain's great men of legend have kept the myths and relics for sixty-one generations, but no one is quite clear on what they must do next. Nothing goes as planned: the complex obligations of reincarnation are straining old relationships, and Morgaine and her henchwomen are trying to kill them.

Somehow, some way, they must make the Healing happen, or Britain is finished.

Mary Fan, author of Starswept and Artificial Absolutes, weighs in:

"Imaginative, mesmerizing, and emotionally complex, Simonds' unique story boldly expands the Arthurian legend into exciting new territory. The fantastical elements—rituals from old Celtic religions, dark magic, forces of fate—are well drawn and skillfully integrated into a contemporary setting. And then there's the romance...the palpable chemistry between Ava and Ron (the Arthur heir), complicated by their respective destinies, makes their relationship a riveting read."

The Midsummer Wife is currently up for pre-order on Amazon. Digital review copies are immediately available to reviewers, book bloggers, and press, and Ms. Church Simonds welcomes request for interviews, guest posts, and reader contests.

The Black Tide

Taral Wayne

Lately I've seen red almost every time I hear anything about Alberta politics. I scarcely know where to start with the statements that come out of that province's politicians, so I'm just going to jump in with one recent pronouncement that gets my dander up. It isn't an isolated attitude, but one that seems to permeate the popular consciousness in oil country. Quote:

"We have been massive contributors to Ottawa, and yet we cannot seem to get any real solidarity in developing the wealth that we share across the country, and that's a point I will make without personal comments in the future."

Jason Kenney, leader of Alberta's United Conservative Party.

I don't think anyone disputes that Alberta is one of the "Have" provinces in the country. There are Ontario and British Columbia, as well, and to describe Quebec or Nova Scotia as "Have Not" is to do them a discredit. It doesn't mean that they are home to factories employing child labour, or that massive numbers of homeless people crowd their cities. It usually means that such a province generates less tax revenue than is necessary to maintain some mandated federal standards. However, there seems to be a pervasive feeling among many Albertans that it is only Alberta that makes it possible for the rest of the country to be counted as part of the developed world.

While Mr. Kenney didn't say as much—this time—he clearly sees that the advantage to Alberta's economy is mutual, and that everyone in Canada has as much to gain from what is good for Alberta. In somewhat different words, whatever is bad for Alberta must be bad for all of us. Putting it even more plainly, there is no future for Canada except following the oil industry's lead. Share in the "trickle down" of Alberta's growing economy, or there is no hope.

This is balderdash, of course. Since the last collapse of the price of oil, it has been impossible to turn a profit on Western Canadian Select—whose proper term is "oil sludge"—and it is hard to sell without write-offs and discounts. More recently, it has become increasingly obvious that the oil industry has been slyly trying to entice the country into subsidizing this unwanted oil...and in recent weeks making it increasingly obvious that the industry will stop producing oil sludge from Alberta unless Ottawa pays us to.

Never even mind the safety of the Kinder Morgan pipe lines...or the sustainability of the environment. There should not even be any debate over those issues.

So much for Alberta leading the way to a rosier economic future for all of us—in reality, the rest of will have to subsidize a loss leader so that unfilled jobs can be protected in the oil patch!

Nor is any of this in the best interest of Alberta. The oil industry has been the tail that wagged the dog for too long, dictating policies for Albertans that pander to short-term jobs, but have hindered the development of other economic activity. High prices and competition from the oil sector have not only distorted the economy of the nation, but also the policies chosen among alternatives open to the province. In reality, this is not a struggle to prove how well Alberta is served by Ottawa, but how well the oil industry serves Alberta...and it does not serve Alberta well.

Even as Albertans have made bold strides toward a greener future, every political decision defers to every whim of the oil industry. While solar panel production makes great leaps forward, lawmakers debate how to expand the production of tar sands. Even as fossil fuel use grows more efficient, the oil industry encourages the growing export of fossil fuels that endanger our future. Can anyone tell me this is in the best interest of Alberta, Canada or the world?

It is time that oil was no longer Alberta's master, but what it is...a 19th century technology that has had its time, but is becoming increasingly obsolete. It is not the time for Alberta to double down, and somehow beat the economic realities to squeeze prosperity out of the tar sand. Alberta has a vibrant, creative economy that only needs time to wean from the dangerous dependency that has grown up over the last forty or so years. Alberta's prosperity needn't rest on a polluted, toxic environment, and a compliant nation assiduously catering to the needs of giant petrochemical industries that are controlled in Texas.

Petrochemicals are the industry of the past; the politicians who do not recognize this are going the same way as the dodos. Let's make sure that the short-term goals and ambitions among the economic elite of one province don't drag the whole country along the same path to extinction.
