Hi Felicity,

Lovely machine.

Joan Baez is his cousin.

[I don't have enough systemising intelligence for mathematics but I do like finding patterns. Instead of finding them in math or nature I find them in various forms of art.]

I have fallen into the Lexx series and am closing in on the end. The trouble with living in a third rate banana republic like the USA is being cut off from what passes for culture elsewhere.

My foray into the bookshelf to read Ace doubles is about over. The two additional alien army units are painted up. The Nekton warrior empire troops came out nicely. (The Nektons are fish-based humanoids who are amphibians but prefer to live in the water.) Project Gutenberg is almost at 59,000 books. Lately they have been doing some of the Worlds of If short stories.

[The Internet Archive was mentioned in a recent issue of National Geographic in an article about Silicon Valley!]

1 EndTransmission's Gaming Stuff: "Cult Mining Bot for Necromunda."

2 Fat Dragon Games: "World War Tesla™ Curtiss SAV Mk. 1 FDG0229."

3 Boing Boing: "Former Walmart Santa Claus Arrested When Bodies of His 2 Kids Found Buried in His Backyard."

4 br1tag: "Frank Zappa: 'The Revenge of the Genetically Modified Monsters.'" [Combination of several Frank Zappa tracks remixed by br1tag.]

5 Math Is in the Air: "A Quest for Beauty and Clear Thinking. Interviewing John Baez."

The next mad scheme is assembling Reviresco's Matson lines steamship. I happen to like building paper models since they are easier to modify than commercial plastic ones. One submarine turned into a spaceship. To be used for the war of the worlds expedition to counterattack Mars. While it was in the process of building, I had noted the resemblance of the parts to a V-2.

I did note the incongruity of those decrying the SF heroes of yore. The knobby-kneed slack-jawed sunken-chested teens who read early SF were as far from a bunch of Aryan superheroes as you could get. Their imagination desired to be somebody as different as they could be. Once those heroes became commonplace the search was on for new ways to thrill the sensa wunda. This is not a problem nor is it a new-found virtue of a different generation, it is just a faddish mutation like owning Pet Rocks.

Pictures are mostly of builds and painting done this year.

Keep on keepin' on.

Warm regards,

Dave

Sunday 10 March 2019

Dear BCSFen:

Over the past few weeks, I have been able to grab some lucrative but short-term at-home/online employment with a Mississauga organization, so any time I've had for writing letters of comment has basically been eaten up entirely. Sunday is mine!, so here comes a loc on BCSFazine 534.

[Glad there was some lucrative work! ☺]

In my past loc, I mentioned something about using a hard drive as a back-up drive, and perhaps using a second massive drive as general storage. One person wrote to me some years ago screaming abuse and asking about USB drives and SD cards. Very true, such small storage can be very handy. A typical USB drive seems to be around 8 to 16 Gb or so, and higher amounts of storage are available. Recently, a 1 Tb USB drive is available, and probably the same on a SD card. Who knows how much storage can be stuffed into one of these little devices?

Yvonne's assignment at Casino Woodbine did come to an end, but now, tomorrow she starts a new short-term assignment at a medical company downtown. With my above-mentioned editorial work, for the first time in a while, we are both employed. Short-term is good, for we are off to England again in late May to mid-June.

Hello, Sheryl...no, we didn't drive in England. We took the Tube where we could, and the train elsewhere. Britain's train network is quite extensive, and popular, too. When it comes to roundabouts, we've got our share in central and southern Ontario. They are not popular, but that means that stoplights are not necessary. I did see the opening episode of this past season of Doctor Who, but simply didn't have the time to see more. One quote from Jodie Whittaker's Doctor I liked... "Sorry, half an hour ago, I was a white-haired Scotsman."

Once again, too many names in the RIP file. I say this whenever I respond to Ansible, and I used to say that when an issue of File 770 would come in. Time does march on, but it does get depressing. This coming June, I celebrate my 60th birthday, and thanks to dear Yvonne, I will be doing that in London.

[The positive side of doing the obituaries is that it alerts me to the existence of people I didn't know about, and I can track down and appreciate their work.]

One of these days, I hope, RSN, we can return to VCON. It's been too long since I've been out to Vancouver to see you all. Help me, 6/49, you're my only hope...

And with that plaintive cry, I am done this letter of mine, and soon, it shall be yours, as soon as our ISPs talk to one another. Keep them coming, and see you when that next issue does arrive.

Yours,
Lloyd Penney

We Also Heard From: Denny Marshall, Kathleen Moore, George Phillies.

Aurora Awards—Eligibility & Nominations Open

Eligibility Lists Open Now

We invite 2019 CSFFA (Canadian Science Fiction and Fantasy Association) members to add any missed works done in 2018 by Canadians into one or more of the eleven (11) 2019 Aurora Awards eligibility lists. (We don’t know everything and everyone who should be in one of our lists.)

Here is your guide when entering one item or multiple items into one or more of the 11 eligibility lists:

· To be able to submit an item (and later to nominate, and even later to vote), you must have paid your $10 2019 CSFFA membership fee

· To submit an item, you must log into your CSFFA account

· All items must have been done in 2018 by Canadians

· All items must be either Science Fiction, Fantasy, or Horror

· Add a link to the work to help us verify it. Please provide as much information as you can to help us verify your suggestion(s). We will not verify an item if we cannot prove that the maker is Canadian and that the work was originally done in 2018.

· Do NOT use quotes around any title such as a poem or short story

· Only enter an item in one category

· Do NOT enter an item more than once in any category

· Check that your suggestion is not already in the list

· If you have made a mistake, do not add it again: instead contact auroraadmin@prixaurorawards.ca for changes

Nominations Open Now

Major change: This year the eligibility lists are NOT open the entire time that nominations are open. The eligibility lists close on March 30. This year nominations open March 1 and close May 18. (In the future we are planning to close the eligibility lists when nominations open.)

For you to have the option to nominate a work, that work 1. must be in the eligibility list and 2. have been verified by the awards administrator.

A verified item in an eligibility list means that you may nominate it. A verified item in an eligibility list does NOT mean it is an Aurora nominee.

Summary:

Until March 30 you may submit one, or more, items to one, or multiple, eligibility lists

Starting March 1 and ending May 18, you may, from one, or multiple, eligibility lists, select the items you wish to be nominees on the 2019 Aurora Awards ballot.

Thanks,

Clifford Samuels

VCON 42 (2018) Day 2: Saturday, October 6, 2018 (Part 2)

Michael Bertrand

Let’s get down to it, boppers.

5 PM: Science Slam YVR. I went to this mostly to find out what the hell it was. The program book didn’t quite make it clear and it sounded like the sort of thing I would enjoy so I said what the heck and went.

Turns out, as the name suggests, it’s like a poetry slam but for science. The idea is to find the best science communicators. So each contestant delivers a five-minute science and then the audience picks a winner.

And I would totally rock that contest. With my big personality, my charisma, my public speaking skills, and most importantly my ability to communicate my enthusiasms, I could get the audience so pumped up about science that they want to go out and earn a doctorate that very afternoon.

I'm not saying they could. But they'd want to.

Because I am genuinely super enthusiastic about science. Sometimes uncomfortably so. Science blows my mind and with my performance and communication skills I am positive I could blow other people's...minds with it too.

The fellow running the event told us that there are similar events all over Canada and that the winners go to some kind of finals round.

Which would be nice and all. But it did not exactly strike me as a well-funded and well-organized event, so I doubt they would be able to pay my way to wherever the finals are taking place anyhow.

Plus, you know, it would involve doing stuff.

6 PM. Have the Geeks Inherited the Earth?

In other words, have we finally reached a point where nerds are accepted into mainstream society? Is it finally the Age of Nerds where we shall rule?

Maybe? I dunno. I was hoping this discussion would be more about the root causes of anti-nerd bias rather than the superficial "Hey look, nerd stuff is super popular" stuff.

But it was supertime and I am sure we all had low blood sugar and so the discussion rambled even more than usual for a nerd-based panel discussion.

I did, at one point, rather unexpectedly find myself defending Big Bang Theory. Not as a show, because personally I don't care for it. But as that super important thing, representation. It presents us nerdy types as people, not stereotypes, with diversity and legitimacy and all kind of good stuff like that.

And it's not perfect. This stage of acceptance for an outgroup never is. BBT represents the stage immediately after your group is depicted purely as a hurtful stereotype, and so there is still a lot of said stereotypes in its DNA.

In the case of BBT, a lot of their jokes still basically amount to "Hah, what a pathetic bunch of loser nerds we are!"

But it's still progress. After all, it's the most popular show on television. And it depicts us nerdy types as real people, albeit in a flawed way.

So while I personally can't stand the show, I am glad it's out there.

7 PM. Time for food. Felicity and I end up going to one of our favorite local eateries, the local Denny's. We enjoyed one another's company, as usual, but I have to admit, that it was a little sad not having Joe and Julian there. This cold and flu season seems to be especially vicious. Quite frankly, it's freaking me out a bit.

10 PM. What Kinks Will We Develop in the Future? An adults-only panel, obviously. The program book said that these events are closed to those under 18 "except with the express permission and presence of their parents or legal guardians."

And I am thinking, "Um, no, not even then. I don't care if the kid is 17 and you have a very progressive parenting style. GTFO."

Just thinking about it gives me the prickly sweats.

Anyhow, it ended up being a wide ranging discussion about the future of sex. The sex-doll brothels threatening to pop up all over the world got mentioned, as did VR, of course. The question of what kinks may develop when physical limitations are removed from the equation was discussed. I brought up my concerns about human beings going insane from too much change in their physicality.

I felt I was especially qualified to speak on this subject because I'm a furry and we have been exploring sex beyond physical limitation for decades. We just do it with our imaginations and our art, not VR and the CRISPR genetic bag of tricks.

11 PM. You Can't Do That at a Convention! Oh Wait, You Can? Another panel for grownups. The main thesis is that you can get away with a surprising amount of outright naughtiness at a convention, especially if you know the laws and the loopholes and hence know exactly what you are doing.

For example, in BC, ladies can walk around with their boobs hanging out and the law has nothing to say about it. After all, men walk around bare chested all the time, and you can't have a law that treats one gender different than the other.

The hotel could, in theory, try to invoke their own rules and toss a bare-breasted maiden out, but they would have to also toss out all bare-breasted men, and that is a whole new kettle of tits fish.

Still, I wish I had been taking notes, because other than the boob thing, all I remember is being pleasantly surprised at all that one can get away with if one is careful.

And this is the sort of information I can use, man. I can totally see myself as an adults-only event organizer and it would be nice to know what I can and cannot do.

And I have to admit, I am exactly the sort of person who could figure out a way to have a really smutty convention without anyone ending up in jail.

Unless you are into that kind of thing. I don't judge.

After that panel, I hung out in the hotel room for a bit then spent some time at the Captain's Party, which was for captains only. So I grabbed a nametag and declared myself to be Captain N. Teneel.

Because what the hell, people my age will get it.

But for those who are younger, here is the answer key:

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=0aU57V6VBW0>

Yeah, that was totally a thing.

No, I am not going to explain it. It was the '70s. Things were...different then.

Or so I am told. I was too young to enjoy it then. Dammit.

I will talk to you nice people again tomorrow.
