By Jean Martin

It’s been a busy, but fun and productive, month since Chris Garcia and I took over the reins of this zine from founder, Jack Avery. But last weekend was perhaps the busiest for me so far this year! I was pretty much all over the Bay Area (I drove back and forth from San Jose to Foster City, Mountain View, San Francisco, Oakland and Hollister) covering and participating in several fan events ranging from science fiction, to fantasy, to historical reenactment. So you could say I was in several time periods and worlds for three days… and I couldn’t have been happier!

Considering I just entered the realm of fandom less than a couple of years ago through the Bay Area English Regency Society, which hosts regency dances at BayCon), I’ve come a long way. But I’ve discovered that there is still such a huge variety of groups and activities in the San Francisco Bay Area that a newbie can be involved with. The diversity is mind-blowing and can be overwhelming. Fortunately, there are lots of overlaps among groups, and I constantly run into the same people at different events.

At SiliCon in San Jose last weekend (see the section on SiliCon in this issue for a more complete story), where I participated in a couple of panels, it seemed like I knew half the people running or attending the convention. I also met a lot of amazing people including fantasy author Diana Paxson, artist Phil Yeh, photographer Danny Low, and screenwriter Wanda Kurtcu (who was in the Star Wars or Star Whimpers panel with me). I also finally got to meet one of my co-editors, Chris Garcia, who said he was born into fandom (lucky guy!), and we brainstormed on the future of the zine.

I received a number of compliments from people about the zine all throughout the weekend, and found out that we do have quite a readership. One of my friends told me that one of her friends told her that SF/SF was her favorite zine! Lots of people are impressed that we are close to 100 pages, and find our comprehensive calendar section (courtesy of the brilliant Jack Avery who also does our layout) very useful.

Unfortunately, I missed the masquerade and the parties at SiliCon Saturday night because I had to go to the Lord of the Rings Feast (see Diane Rooney’s fantastic coverage of the event in the pages that follow) in the Oakland Hills. I also left SiliCon early Sunday afternoon to go to the Casa de Ren Faire (see my article also in this issue). I was so exhausted driving back from Hollister that I didn’t make Decompression, the after-Burning Man block party in San Francisco, which I hear was a lot of fun.

However, the best part for me about being in fandom is not just the events and activities. It’s being with people who are all just so nice, friendly, creative and intelligent. I keep saying this because it’s true! I’ve wanted to find kindred spirits and they abound in fandom. There’s a sense of community, and we all do what we do because we love it. I’m very glad to be a part of this family, and feel privileged to be reporting on it twice a month. I look forward to entertaining more of you in the future with our zine, and meeting you all at an event or convention!

Yaoi fans gather for Yaoicon 2005

Fans of Yaoi, a subgenre of anime and manga that focuses on male-male relationships, will gather at the Westin San Francisco Airport Hotel the weekend of October 28-30 for the fifth annual Yaoi-con.

Guests include manga creator Kodaka Kazuma, creator of Kizuna and Kusatta Kyoushi no Houteishiki.

The convention will include panels, workshops, a cosplay contest, and both animated and live action videos.

Yaoi is intended for a female audience, and most attendees will be women, although fans of all sexes and persuasions are welcome. Because of the mature themes, the convention is for those 18 and older.

Website: www.yaoicon.com
isn’t going to go away. I could almost see a logical argument for having a NASFiC every year regardless of the location of Worldcon - it would then be up to the respective voters to decide whether to combine it with Worldcon where possible or go elsewhere. But this would require a definitive answer to the “What is NASFiC for?” debate. Or, given that this is SF fandom we are talking about here, at least some competing consensuses.

Hope SiliCon went well for everyone who went - looking forward to the con reports in a future SF/SF.

Chris Garcia responds:

Well, we’re glad to be back, Peter! I’m firmly of the opinion that we’ll be around for a long, long time.

There’s always been a lot of debate of the Sercon community. They’re even ridiculed in The Enchanted Duplicator! I’m one of those guys who firmly believes that fanzines can be about more than just fandom but can discuss serious matters and do reviews. In fact, one of my favourite zines right now is Some Fantastic which is like an academic Emerald City, only more interesting. We’re putting out a fannish agenda, which I believe I could sum up in two words: Do Somethin’!

There were a lot of folks at Silicon who had certainly read SF/SF, and I got to talk to many of them. My personal favourite part was when the head of the Con, Dann Lopez, was chatting with an Animation fan and he mentioned us as the best thing going for BArea fandom. I told them I was one of the editors and they really wanted to know more. Getting people involved takes time, but getting people to read can be even harder. It seems like we’re making a stand to get both done!

Yeah, NASFiC is weird. I’m beginning to realize that there are parallels with Silicon as well. Some see it as a smaller, extraneous convention that doesn’t need to happen, that the larger, more established cons are all we need. I don’t know if I agree, but if they were just trying to do the same things that the other cons (WorldCon and BayCon) were doing I’d say no, they can go away. But Silicon has certainly broken out a bit, is more costume and media driven than BayCon (which isn’t a knock on BC at all) and I think there’s room for both. NASFiC has yet to discover where it can change and make sense, but all it takes is one successful bidder with a great idea.

Have something to say about Science Fiction/San Francisco? Or about fandom in general?

Westercon 60: Gnomeward Bound

San Jose has had issues getting some of the touring conventions. There are fan politics a plenty that enter into things when bidding for something like a Westercon, and San Jose had run afoul of a lot of folks over the years. It happens, and it didn’t help that the last BArea Westercon, the Oakland Westercon in the late 1980s, was a failure of legendary proportions.

Over the last several years, the people who bring us BayCon have been bidding for a BArea Westercon. In 2003, when the voting was in Seattle, they put up a fine bid, though they had the Santa Clara Convention Centre as the con hotel and not the traditional DoubleTree. The vote happened and Calgary got the win and the Jantzen Beach and Columbia River DoubleTrees were no more. With the hotels gone, the Portland group started looking for another hotel that would be suitable for the con, but did not find one that would work. San Jose was left alone on the official ballot.

The San Jose bid didn’t rest, but instead they put out a massive effort with parties and fan table at many cons around the west. They had a mascot: Jose the Gnome. They brought all the gnomes all over the country, and eventually to the Calgary Westercon where the voting was taking place. There were rumblings of folks trying to get Portland written-in, but San Jose took it in a walk.

So, fourth of July weekend, 2007, you’ve got a San Jose Westercon for the first time since 1985. It’ll be a party, that’s for sure. Michael Siladi is chairman and the GoHs are Artist Theresa Mather, fan Christian McGuire, and writer Tad Williams. The location is the San Jose DoubleTree, right at the airport. Make your plans now!

Dragon’s Head Inn
Haunted House in Sonoma

In the early 1990s, it’s arguable to say that Haunted Houses were starting to trail off. You had Gyro’s Worlds of Terror in the South Bay, a few here and there, but unlike the late 1970s and early 80s, there weren’t hundreds of them all over the Bay Area. In recent years, large establishments like Marine World have added haunted nights, but in the early 1990s, several groups, like The Pirates of Emerson, started small haunted houses of their own that would eventually fill the gap. The Marcums of Sonoma started doing a small display in the front of their house, just something to spook and entertain the local trick-or-treaters. Every year, it grew and grew and eventually the entire front lawn was a tented haunted house! Folks came from all over and they started accepting donations for The Valley of the Moon Children’s Home. In 2000, they became a non-profit, moved to a lot instead of holding it in front of the house, and they made The Sonoma Children’s Cancer Foundation the official charity of the haunt. Ever since, they’ve been putting on a fantastic haunted house in the heart of the Sonoma Valley.

This year’s Dragon’s Head Inn is open Fridays and Saturdays through the 29th, and also Sunday the 30th and Monday, Halloween itself. The group also has a Dragonfaire on the 22nd and 23rd, where the kids are encouraged to come on out, see the crafts and listen to the storytellers, and also take a walk through the house with the lights on, to lessen the scares for the little ones.

In a fun little addition that’ll make it even more SF/SF reader-friendly, the Klingons of the Ring of Fire Fleet have announced a Blood Feud to see who will give the most blood during the time of the house on October 22nd: the citizens of Sonoma or the members of the Fleet. There’ll also be a challenge between the ships of the Klingon fleet to see which of them will account for the most donated blood. The event is being hosted by the IKV Bloodlust and there will be Klingons in full regalia wandering around the Dragon’s Head Inn during that Saturday evening.

The Dragon’s Head Inn is located at 631 West Spain Street in Sonoma, just off of 5th Street West. The hours for the house are 7 to 10 p.m., except for Halloween night when it’s 5 to 8 p.m. Dragonfaire is 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday the 22nd and 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Sunday the 23rd. Chris Garcia Visits Las Vegas Fandom

It’s 7 hours and 45 minutes from my parking space in Santa Clara to the front door of the Palace Station Hotel-Casino just North of the 15 Freeway in Las Vegas. I know this because I was keeping a close eye on the clock and speedometer. I always become very conscious of the way in which I drive.

This time, I had another reason to keep going since I was going to meet and greet with the Vegrans: that group of jolly fans in that city of Glitter and Sin. I had been invited as a part of a plan to bring some of Anrie and Joyce Katz’s video game related things to the Computer History Museum, where I ply my trade. I made the trip, stopping at the Palace Station just long enough to look for souvenirs and drop forty bucks at the Pai-Gow table. Due to my leaving at 5am, and the fact that it took me nearly two hours less than I had thought, I got to the Katz Residence two hours earlier in the afternoon than I expected.

If you don’t know who Arnie and Joyce Katz are, you’ve probably not read much on eFanzines.com. Arnie is the editor of Vegas Fandom Weekly, and historically he edited fanzines like Quip, Folly, Flicker and so many many more. Joyce has done many zines of her own, and her recent work, Hard Science Tales, is one of the best pieces on eFanzines. Arnie and Joyce, along with Bill Kunkle, also founded Electronic Games, the first computer game magazine which very much is considered to be the start of modern video game journalism. They also did The Main Event, a classic wrestling magazine that gave Dave Meltzer, the wrestling journalist of the last two decades, his first break. They are BNFs who have been in and around fandom for a long time. I had never had the chance to meet them, so my trip was a happy event for me.

Once I arrived, I came face to face with the legends. Joyce, still recovering from her recent ankle surgery, was stuck in a wheelchair, so we stuck around the living room and chatted while waiting for the main event to begin. We sat down and just chatted.

And chatted.

And chatted.

I basically received an education in the ways of the fanzine fan. I may have been around and reading them since I was a babe, but getting to hear the thoughts of two such deeply rooted fans showed me brand new depths and areas that I hadn’t thought of looking into. It’s amazing the things that I just didn’t know. It’s a smart fan who knows how little he knows, and it is a smarter fan who goes to smarter fans to find out what the smartest fans told them. I think that’s how the traditional fannish prophesy goes.

While we talked about fanzines, about fans, and just plain about fandom, we also talked about wrestling, my other passion, and video games, my sly mistress. When I first started LoCing fanzines, I sent a note to Jan Stinson who edits Peregrine Nations. She Googled my name and discovered that I wrote about wrestling and video games. She accused me of being Arnie in disguise, playing a rib on her. That story got a chuckle out of Joyce and Arnie. I really should start pretending to be Arnie once in a while.

As the afternoon slipped away, folks started to show up. The first wave came to help set-up. Since Joyce was chair-bound, a small group came to help set-up. The Andersons, Merric and Lubov, and Joelle arrived first and set out more food than I thought one coffee table could possibly handle. I swear that I saw it sagging under the weight of all the cookies, meatballs and chips. After things were set up, we got around to the real purpose of a Vegrants gathering: large group conversation.

It’s odd that every fandom has the same people in it. In BArea fandom, or at least the variation that I hang around in, we have a merry prankster named Frank Wu. He’s funny and would even qualify as zany. Vegas Fandom has Merric, whose first question to me was about whether or not I could physically do a Rockettes’ Style Kick Line (the answer is no). They may have been separated at birth. Both Joelle and Lubov are tiny, neither of them much bigger than five feet, and quite possibly a bit shorter. They were both lovely conversation, and even better, when Merric and I started doing un-planned bits, they laughed along, which is an excellent meter of party success.

Others arrived and the party was in full swing. I got to meet the folks I’ve been reading about in VFW for months now. The Non-Singing James Taylor showed up early and we had a nice chat or two throughout the evening. Kent Hastings and I talked computers. John Hardin and I talked computers. While these may not sound like the most exciting of conversations, they revealed something that I think is very important to any fandom. I felt like I was just another member, not a guy who had never met any of these people before and was at the party as a stare-worthy curiosity. I made jokes, I talked shop, I even made obtuse references to television shows that no one else had ever seen, and they put up with it! Wonderful!

One of the wonderful things about the trip was that I got to meet some of the people I had been most interested in meeting for years.

Alan White, whose fansite1 has provided many with great art, and I chatted for a while, which is something that I hope to get another chance to do soon.

I met Ross Chamberlin, the artist behind the artwork of Arnie and rich brown’s 1970s edition of The Enchanted Duplicator, which Arnie most graciously gifted me a copy of on my trip. I talked to folks whose work I knew from SNAPS, the Southern Nevada Amateur Press Society. Lori Forbes, Theresa Cochrane and more.

More News and Notes on Next Page
It was a wonderful time and I now have faces to put with the Bolded names of Vegas Fandom Weekly.

As the event went on, I got to chat with more and more people for longer and longer. It was nice, even though I was reaching my physiological limit when it came to staying awake. Around 1:30 or so, we wrapped up, and I headed off to sleep-ybye land with vision of fandom dancing in my head.

It didn’t take long for me to realize exactly how lucky I was. I had come to a group of total strangers and found that I was, in fact, one of them. I had been entertained, and in turn been entertaining, among a group of folks that really love fandom. Sadly, I hadn’t gotten to meet everyone, but I can use the fact that there are people still left to meet as an excuse to come back and spend more time in the clutch of Vegas Fandom.

After getting the stuff from the Katz garage, I jetted out of Vegas, making a brief stop at the speed track where they test jet cars and people do their land-yachting. No jet car for me, but I did get to speed my Mom’s Corola at nearly 170 MPH across the flats! Gotta love the desert, but more importantly, you gotta love the people who make it their home.

The Chainsaw Mafia 2005 Independent Horror Film Festival

Thursday, October 20th, Oakland’s Parkway Theater. If you like horror, you’ll wanna catch The Chainsaw Mafia’s Indy Horror Film Festival. This one is going to be an over-the-top event with more than just the films to entertain you.

The Chainsaw Mafia started as a production company run by the talented Shannon Lark. That soon became thechainsawmafia.com, a place where California’s horror filmmakers and fans could network and discuss the important aspects of zombies and filmmaking and so forth. This drew a great many horror fans from around the state and the country.

The Chainsaw Mafia’s Indy Horror Festival will feature some great films. With a number of short films, you’ll get to see some greats from local directors and some from around the world. Among the films to be shown will be Sonoma Valley Film Festival 2004 favourite The Fine Art of Poisoning by SFites Jill Tracy and Bill Domonkos, Roommate from Hell from Allen Piper, Zombisize by Jason Goodman and Shannon Lark and Torment by Lissy Borgan. Other films include Grave Face for Film, Labyrinth of Doors, Wahlpurgis Nacht, four trailers for feature films and more!

Scary-Art.com will also have tables for local artists who want to get their art seen by those who are likely to appreciate it. Among them will be painter Chase Worthington, FX artist Lena Tony and photographer Sallie Smith.

But wait, there’s also a play to be done. Re-Animator, the classic SplatterFilm that spawned a thousand imitators, will be performed LIVE! The event has also announced that Barf Bags will be provided.

In addition there’s the matter of the Living Dead Girlz. The LDG is a dance and performance group who happen to be zombies. That’s right, sort of a set of Undead Fly-Girls. They’ll be dancing and generally being entertaining throughout the festival.

The Parkway Theatre is located at 1834 Park Blvd. in Oakland and admission is six bucks. The show starts at 9:15 p.m., though it’s recommended that you get there early. The after-party is at SF’s DNA Lounge at 375 11th Street at Harrison and is a part of MEAT. That party starts at 9:30 p.m. and runs until 2 a.m. The Living Dead Girlz will also be making an appearance there and the admission is five bucks. If there’s a better way to get into the Halloween spirit, I don’t know what it is.
SiliCon 2005, a science fiction convention, was held last October 7–9 at the Doubletree Hotel in San Jose. The theme for this year was “Science Fiction Through the Ages.” Typical of fan conventions, there were panels, parties, dealers, artists and a masquerade competition. The weekend was a lot of fun, and Dr. Noe, Carole Parker and I offer three views of the convention in our coverage below.

SiliCon’s Guests of Honor
By Jean Martin
Editor

The first big event at SiliCon was the “Meet the Guests” reception Friday evening. The meeting room was packed with guests and convention “members” (everyone who attends the convention is called a “member”). Some were already in costume!

One of the owners of SiliCon began the festivities by giving a brief summary of the 20-year history of SiliCon, and introducing the chairman for 2005, Craig Nicolai.

Next up was a magic show by Peter Dany as Vampire Hunter D

Winch, who was entertaining and humorous at the same time. He asked me to hold three linked magic rings, which I inspected and didn’t have any gaps as I thought they would. I have no idea how he was able to separate them afterwards. I guess that’s what makes them magical.

Toni and Bill Blair, as this year’s Toastmasters, went on stage after the magic show, and hosted the rest of the reception. Both are professional actors and have appeared in several sci-fi and genre movie and TV shows.

They introduced Diana Paxson, the convention’s Writer Guest of Honor (GoH). Diana, who has continued the Avalon legacy that Marion Zimmer Bradley started, is a famous author in her own right. She recounted the history of sci-fi and fantasy from her perspective, from the early 50s through today. The 50s sowed the seeds of what is to become the science fiction of today, but it was the 60s where the genre exploded. That was when Star Trek became a household name, and Lord of the Rings became a worldwide bestseller. The 70s saw the rise of Star Wars, and when Diana started writing fantasy for adults (as opposed to literary fiction thanks to her friend Marion Zimmer Bradley), which was before that mostly written for children. Now in the 21st century, we have Harry Potter, Buffy the Vampire Slayer, and the Lord of the Rings movies.

Her talk was very inspirational and I loved how she said that fandom is here to stay. She mentioned how most of us fans start out with an interest in art, songs, costumes, etc. and then we discover each other and create our own worlds. I also discovered that in the 60s she founded the Society for Creative Anachronism (SCA), which I’m peripherally involved in. As I’ve mentioned numerous times in my various articles and in my current editorial, most people in fandom are not part of the mainstream, but we are usually the same people that like the same genres. Diana reflected my thoughts when she said that sci-fi and fantasy, and even mainstream culture, are becoming more complementary, and the distinctions have become blurred. And as long as we keep being creative and open to new ideas, and keep asking “what if,” we will all have more fascinating things to talk about in the future.

Tom Whitmore, the Fan GoH, was up next. The owner of “Another Change of Hobbit,” a popular bookstore in Berkeley, echoed Diana’s thoughts. He said we build our own communities, we make things happen, and have fun for ourselves. He also said that we live in a science fiction world where numerous scientific discoveries keep coming to light.

Media GoH, Cathy Garver (Cissy on Family Affair), who does voiceovers for animation, audio books, and radio plays, said she likes going to conventions where there’s the magic of friendship, and the sharing of commonalities.

Last but not the least was the very entertaining, Phil Yeh, the Artist GoH. He took a different tack and talked about what he does for a living and how he travels the world promoting literacy. He had a lot of funny stories about his experiences abroad, and throughout his life, which included him being hailed as a superstar in Hong Kong, and being friends with Harlan Ellison.

I was lucky enough to meet Diana, Tom and Phil. They’re such wonderful people and were very down-to-earth. At conventions and elsewhere, the “celebrities” of fandom are fans first and foremost, just like the rest of us.

SiliCon: The Small Con With The Big Heart
By Dr. Noe
Staff Writer

As the saying goes, “good things come in small packages.” This includes SiliCon, a science-fiction convention held October 7–9 at the DoubleTree Hotel in San Jose (also home to BayCon).

SiliCon itself is a non-profit convention whose proceeds go to benefit the Diabetes Society of Santa Clara Valley. What it lacks in size it makes up for in fun. Though small, SiliCon offered enough for con-goers throughout the weekend.

Panels are a much different experience on such a small scale. Instead of the typical listening to moderators, stars, etc. speak their piece then attendees line up for Q&A, Silicon panels were more interactive. No matter the size of the room, the panel was more like an all-inclusive discussion or a bunch of friends sitting at a bar discussing their favorite topics. The few I attended were great fun. The Serenity panel had great involvement with everyone chiming in with their two cents about the show and movie: theories, character arcs and backgrounds, what they would like to see in future movies. Everybody had their chance to speak and share their thoughts with the group.

The same applied for the “Art to Costume” and “Costuming Firefly” panels. Although the there wasn’t really a seat available in the room, the same mentality was there. People would ask their questions to the mediator from where they stood and sat. What’s great about this is that no questions really have to be re-asked. Everyone is able to hear both question and response.

Sadly, not all panels achieved this level. Some were poorly attended or had no attendees at all. This leads to one of the issues with SiliCon: there’s plenty to see and do, but there needed to be more people there to do it.

Even Saturday night’s masquerade was poorly attended. It took place in one of the DoubleTree’s larger rooms, but attendance and participation were small. Also, pictures were near impossible. Understandably, they didn’t want flash photography during the event, but for those with less-than-stellar cameras it made getting photos of the participants nil. There was a photo area set up, but most attendees pretty much tore out of their costumes the moment the Masquerade was finished. One other issue was the sound folks didn’t have everything together. They seemed to have a very nice audio set-up, but its operators had none of the music prepped for the contestants when it was their turn to emerge on stage.

Another victim of small attendance was the dealers’ room. It was filled with about 22 vendors, but the attendance just wasn’t there to warrant handfuls of cash from shoppers buying wares.

Some other events featured throughout the weekend included Belly Dancers on Saturday night, Gemology, a Goth dance which followed the Masquerade, a discussion on the next Harry Potter book, the Independent Film Festival, “Star Wars or Star Whimpers?,” a charity auction, an art show, and the traditional Eye of Argon reading party.

Guests of honor for the weekend included Kathy Garver, best known for Cissy in Family Affair, and has done video programming for the Sci-Fi Channel, and radio plays for the Twilight Zone; writer Diana Paxson whose works include The Hallowed Isle and the Westria series; artist Phil Yeh; and toastmasters Bill and Toni Blair.
who, between them, have stacked up an impressive resume including appearances/parts in Alien Nation, Star Trek: Deep Space Nine, Charmed, Along Came Polly, Buffy the Vampire Slayer, That 70’s Show and more.

Two of the seemingly successful parts of the weekend were the gaming room and the traditional Saturday night party floor. Among some of the parties were Mara’s Bar (complete with slave auction), a Firefly party, and an Evil Genius’ party complete with “framed” photos of great evil geniuses: Khan from Star Trek, The Joker and Harley Quinn from Batman, Dr. Doom, and the Eye of Sauron among others.

As with every con, even small ones, it is difficult to get around to everything. Part of this was that I did work the con, which itself was an experience, just to get some of the inside mutterings and inner workings of a con. That, however, is another story.

One of the most disappointing things I witnessed during the weekend was Friday night’s performance of The Rocky Horror Picture Show. From what I witnessed, the cast seemed like it had been created no more than a week before the show, and it was supposed to have been culled from several casts that perform the show. Costuming for most of the cast was poor or not there. Janet’s plane purple polyester proposal suit was a blue floral-print summer dress, and her pink dress that followed also followed the summer dress design with yet another print on it. Also, the Janet seemed to not know her lines. The cast’s Riff Raff had absolutely no costuming whatsoever, not even a bald cap to mimic the role Richard O’Brien has immortalized.

Staging was another problem. Oftentimes the actors were not in position of what was on the screen, and during the course of the show looked directly at the screen (a big Rocky no-no) to see where they were supposed to be. The one saving grace of this was that the Magenta’s costuming was dead-on accurate, with the small exception that her hair was black instead of red like the character. I could go on about this but I will leave it where it lays, a bad experience in Rocky Horror. I feel sorry for the virgins to whom this was their first experience of this fine cult classic.

Don’t let the bits of negativity fool you, this was a fun con to attend, it just needs a little love, and more people. Sure there are some wrinkles here, and there but what con doesn’t have them? Even if it is small, remember, this is completely fan run and operated. The only thing that would make this con more enjoyable is you.

Inside SiliCon
by Carole Parker

Well, I thought that I would be exhausted by the end of the convention. After all, I was responsible for: website manager, costume programming, the first-ever SiliCon Independent Film Festival, filmmaking programming in cooperation with Hilary Ayer, and the masquerade green room.

However, I was not the exhausted wreck that I expected to be. I still had some minor frustrations and small problems to deal with, but nothing that couldn’t be handled. This may be partly due to the fact that SiliCon did not attract as many people as we planned for. The San Jose DoubleTree Hotel instituted paid parking in time for the convention. We tried to get the word out, but not enough people found out about it.

Stories abounded of people coming to the hotel, discovering the paid parking, turning around and leaving. Some parked out on the street, but we don’t know how many people stayed away because of the paid parking — even though SiliCon members got their parking for free.

The first-ever Independent Film Festival happened without a hitch thanks to the superb work of Bryan “Smash” Manternach, and a last-minute volunteer, Stephan Keith. We had two hours of live action and animated films from mostly local independent filmmakers. We did have one animated film come from Texas. Audience members enjoyed the films with one lady observing that “there were some good films in there.”

Our guests of honor (GoH) had a good time, and not only participated in panels and signings, but also took the time to go to the parties in the evening. Convention members enjoyed the opportunity to informally talk with the GoHs.

The SiliCon Masquerade was small but mighty with eight entries. Audience members laughed appropriately at some of the entries, and enjoyed the show. Entrants had fun, and the audience had the treat of seeing a dojo perform to Taiko drums.

Overall, things seemed to go smoothly, and most importantly, everyone had a good time. That’s why we help put conventions on. We want everyone to have a good time.

Harvest Time at the Renaissance Faire

By Jean Martin
Editor

It's been a couple of years since the last time I went to the Northern California Renaissance Faire at Casa de Fruta in Hollister (affectionately called Casa de Ren Faire by regulars). It's a far drive and I've found it difficult to coordinate my busy schedule with my friends' equally hectic lives. But I finally got to go last October 9th and it was definitely worth it.

I went with my friend Sir Lance and met up with three of my friends from the Prancing Pony Players who dressed up as lovely hobbit lasses. I also ran into another friend Lady Kalessia who was working at the fudge and sweets booth.

As I meandered along the winding paths, with the tree branches hanging overhead, the straw-covered ground, and decorated vendor booths all around me, I felt like I was really in an English faire during the Renaissance. The Faire was meant to portray an English village at harvest time and they did a fantastic job recreating the period.

Queen Elizabeth I, and her court (The Royal Order of the Tudor Rose), wandered all over the Faire visiting her subjects and stopping once in a while for comestibles, spirits, and entertainment. Other than the aristocrats that follow the Queen, there were also middle class players from guilds.
such as the Town Criers of St. Blaise, who portray messengers, bell-ringers, and heralds. The rest of the participants were, of course, lively peasants.

One of the most enjoyable treats at the Faire, and one I look forward to, is the food. Just like food courts at the malls of today but with a Renaissance flavour. Although I'm vegetarian, I love seeing people feasting on turkey legs, meat pies, and other English viands of the day. I usually go for the Greek booth because they have a lot of vegetarian items such as spanakopitas and Greek salads. I also tried a fruit crepe for dessert. Not very Renaissance or English but what can I do? English cuisine is very meat-oriented!

After satisfying my hunger with a hearty lunch, I continued to window shop and checked out shops that of interest to me. One of my favourite fantasy artists, Nancy Chien-Ericksen, was there. There were master artisans scattered throughout with specialties such as armor, weapons, leather goods, sculpture and jewelry. There were a lot of clothing stores as well with colorful and lovely clothes for women, and dashing ones for men. Items I purchased that afternoon included a black moleskin cape, a Welsh sweetheart (nope, this is not a person but a beautiful braided wheat ornament), and a Celtic pewter heart necklace from Fellowship Foundry.

Other fun activities included games, a giant swing, and school for fencing. There were several stages set up for entertainment, which featured comedians, actors, dancers and singers. There was the requisite jousting courtesy of the Knights of Avalon. Street performers were also everywhere ranging from fools to trolls.

The Northern California Renaissance Faire is presented by Play Faire Productions and goes for seven weekends from early September through mid-October. For more information, go to: http://www.norcalrenfaire.org/.

Northern California Mars Society

The Northern California chapter of the Mars society participated in the Street Fair at the Sally Ride Science Festival at NASA Ames Research Center on Sunday, October 2, 2005, with a table featuring some brief demonstrations of voice-recognition, a video about Mars exploration, a Mars analog spacesuit, and a human factors workstation that enabled children of all ages to experience and overcome the difficulties of performing simple tasks while wearing a spacesuit.

Mars society members John McGowan, Lucinda Weisbach, Jean Marie Walker, Eric McGuire, and Jim Brown staffed the popular Northern California Mars Society table at the Street Fair.

Adults and children alike enjoyed trying on the Mars analog spacesuit helmet and performing simple tasks such as screwing a nut on a bolt while wearing a helmet and simulated spacesuit gloves. Even simple tasks such as this are difficult wearing a spacesuit.

The Sally Ride Science Festivals organization stages festivals and other programs on science for girls fifth grade... through eighth grade.

The festivals are held nationwide at many locations each year. A festival is held in the Bay Area each year.

Sally Ride, now a professor at Stanford University, is the first American woman astronaut to fly in space.

The October 2nd event, entitled “Reach for the Stars,” featured an inspiring talk by astronaut Sally Ride, Discovery Workshops for girls given by local veterinarians, astronomers, microbiologists, and engineers; and workshops for parents and teachers on ways to support girls’ interests in science and math.

Bay Area cosplayers at Animagic

Animagic, one of the larger California anime conventions, was held the weekend of September 30 to October 2 in Lancaster.

Many prominent Bay Area cosplayers and cameko made the trip down to the L.A. area for the convention. Animagic is a very cosplayer friendly convention and the attendees reported having a good time this year.

More convention photos can be found on page 36-37.

Four local speculative fiction authors participated in a Lit Crawl event held October 15 as part of the fourth annual Litquake literary festival.

Various locations in San Francisco’s Mission District hosted readings including Borderlands Books who hosted Michael Blumlein, Loren Rhoads, Pat Murphy and Richard A. Lupoff.

Blumlein started off the event with by reading a short story “Strategy for Conflict Avoidance: Memo to the Commander in Chief”. He said the story came from thought that science is an amoral enterprise, but that it could be used to shed light on moral questions.

The story was not speculative fiction, however, and seemed to have been chosen to appeal to the mundane crowd that the event drew rather than for the serious science fiction fan.

Lupoff chose to read from a work in progress, “Hebrews Have No Horns”. Set in turn of the century San Francisco, and told first person from the point of view of a colorful Irish immigrant, the fragment was wonderfully evocative of its time and place. While Lupoff did not arrive at the point in the story where a fantastic element might be introduced, the opening left the possibilities of being either fantasy, horror, mystery, retro-science fiction or even a straight historical novel.

Rhoads, best known as the editor of Morbid Curiosity, read “The Acid That Dissolves Images”, which proved to be the most overtly science fictional of the readings. The story, from her chapbook “Ashes and Rust” was very much in the modern horror vein.

The last reader of the event, Pat Murphy, chose to read from her work in progress, a young adult novel called “Wild Girls”.

The three excerpts chosen, about a young girl who wants to become a writer, did not contain any fantastic elements and it wasn’t clear if the novel would be science fiction.

An Evening in Rivendell

By Diane Rooney
Staff Writer

The Greater Bay Area Costumer’s Guild (GBACG) sponsored a special Lord of the Rings Feast at the Sequoia Lodge at Joaquin Miller Park, secluded high in the Oakland Hills and nestled among eucalyptus and redwood trees. An Evening in Rivendell, Lord Elrond’s realm, was the theme of the event, which took place Saturday, October 8.

The lodge was transformed into Elrond’s hall, surrounded by woods, lit by candles, and warmed by a bright hearth. Seventy two guests attended, most costumed as elves, but men and women of Rohan and Gondor, a handful of hobbits, a Haradrim mumakil driver, and a Ringwraith were also present.

Guests gathered on the wooden deck for conversation and photo opportunities before entering for dinner just after 7pm, beneath a waxing crescent moon that lingered in the western sky.

Several of the guests had purchased costumes at the San Francisco Opera costume sale in July and altered and embellished them for the Lord of the Rings Feast. One was Nancy of Oakland, whose peacock blue dress was trimmed with gold. She had altered the sleeves and added a hood. Her husband Karl was clad as a lord of Gondor.

The dining room was lit with candles...

and the doors were opened to the deck and the trees beyond, allowing guests to experience gentle breezes and twilight birdsong, just as they would in Rivendell. Guests mingled and enjoyed appetizers including bread, cheese, and a variety of spreads as a harpist played. GBACG President Kendra Van Cleave, dressed in lavender elven gown with flowing silver sleeves, welcomed everyone and read a description of Rivendell from The Fellowship of the Ring.

The three course dinner included a salad course and Middle-Earth themed entrees including Master Samwise’s roast chicken, as well as pork and vegetarian frittata, offered with potatoes, carrots, and other vegetables. Decanters of cider were provided, and many guests brought wine and beer. Bread pudding with sauce was one of three desserts, and elves circulated offering baskets filled with chocolate leaves.

After dinner, Kendra read the description of the Hall of Fire from Fellowship. Featured singers, accompanied by the harpist, performed Pippin’s Song and Into the West. They were followed by Philip and Kathe Gust’s performance of Theoden’s arming scene from The Two Towers, which brought down the house. Philip’s Theoden costume required over 2,000 hours of work. (For costume details, please see the tutorial at http://celefinniel.webhop.net/).

Guests came from Sacramento and even from the Los Angeles area: Kent, dressed as Aragorn, had come up for the weekend for the Renaissance Faire and the Feast. Guests at my table included Theoden, King of Rohan, and his niece the Lady Eowyn, dressed in green, Thranduil of Mirkwood, lord of the northern realm, in attendance with his lady and son Legolas, and Ithilronde (Moon Wanderer) of Dol Amroth.

Thranduil was dignified and resplendent in a green robe, high-collared green tunic with elven motifs, and circlet of red leaves. His son worked as an avid photographer, deftly manipulating a collapsible tripod and not missing a shot.
Science Fiction/San Francisco Editor Jean Martin was there, dressed as Eowyn of Rohan in a white gown and blonde wig. Her friend, Theresa Eacker, wore a red gown with red patterned fabric at the sleeves and neckline, complimented by a radiant golden cloak.

After the Hall of Fire the evening was turned over to the dances, and dancers, of Middle Earth. Those seated with a goblet of wine or a mug of ale watched as the golden circlets, hand sewn embroidery, silks and velvets worn by twirling elves caught flashes of light from the candles and scattered it across the Hall of Fire. It was a magical evening, with friendships renewed and new ones forged.

TeslaCon: 2005’s Vintacon

By Andy Trembley

Teslacon, the 2005 Vintacon began with a fizzle rather than a pop. Traffic put most attendees at the Courtyard Livermore after 7:00pm, and in most cases without any dinner. Not so dim as to start drinking on an empty stomach, it meant that festivities couldn’t really start until after some food. The largest group ran off to Casa Orozco in downtown Livermore. Casa Orozco is a very popular restaurant, and for good reason. It did mean, though, that hospitality didn’t open until after 10:00pm.

Upon return, we opened hospitality and the registration desk. Spring Schoenhuth, registration maven, did an exceptional job putting together the registration packets, wine charms and badge holders. Everybody got glowing rubber-band bracelets with appropriate phrases molded into them (“toxic” and “radioactive” were common). As usual, Friday hospitality was “Deadly Zins” and with one exception, lived up to the name. White Crane zin, Klinkerbrick zin, Moon Valley zin, Livermore Valley Cellars zin, and was, well, undead. In grand Vintacon tradition, we attempted a few hands of Frog Juice and then moved on to a few games of Apples to Apples before crashing.

Saturday morning the remaining members joined us after a quick breakfast. Dave Gallaher (van driver extraordinaire and hotel liason) and Gayle Wiesner (designated driver #2) shuttled us around construction and detours to get us to our first stop, Bent Creek Winery. Bent Creek was tasting everything but their Cabernet Sauvignon, which they had just sold out of. It was a popular stop with the membership. As we were leaving, Pat (one of the owners) let us know it was a good thing our next stop was expecting us, as “Earl is a bit busy today.” Cedar Mountain was a bit busy, but not with customers. Rich (the winemaker from Bent Creek) had been trucking in grapes all morning to be de-stemmed (quite a few Livermore wineries rent time on Cedar Mountain’s equipment), so he and Earl were busy. We got a quick view of the process, and got to sample some of Rich’s syrah (I think it was syrah) grapes. If you’ve never tasted wine grapes, it’s different from table grapes. The berries are smaller, less juicy and sweeter, with a much more concentrated flavor. Again a popular stop, they made some pretty good sales with us. Linda (owner and business manager) joined us for a small picnic lunch before we moved on to the next stop. Steven Kent Winery was a little surprised at our arrival, but with good reason; their internet connection at the tasting room had been hosed up for the last few weeks, and they had to print emails at home and bring them in. Still, they rose to the occasion, and we tasted 5 wines (including a single-vineyard Cabernet Sauvignon that wasn’t on the list). Steven and his gang have cardboard caps on their wine barrels, so we all signed one that we decorated with rocket ship stickers before moving along.

We followed a Ford Country Wagon with rocket ship taillights most of the way to the Mitchell Katz Winery at Ruby Hill. Located in the rebuilt Ruby Hill Winery (it burned to the ground in the late 80’s), Katz turns out a lot of wines, including possibly the best California Sangiovese produced anywhere. It was about this time that we discovered tasting at 5 wineries in one day might be a bit too much. Still, we soldiered on, tasted everything on offer (and it was a lot) and bought a little bit.

Our final stop for the day was Thomas Coyne Winery in the old Chateau Bellevue Winery (yes, older than Ruby Hill and still standing). Happily, it was a Rhone day, so we got to taste some of their wilder selections. The tasting room was the busiest that any of us had ever seen it. Tom and Emilie got us through the tasting at a reasonable pace, and then it was time to return to the hotel and get ready for the night’s winemakers’ dinner.

Winemakers’ Dinner? After tasting at 5 wineries? Yep, the Radisson Hotel Dublin hosted a Bent Creek Winery dinner. The chef walked us through several pairings. Appetizers were grilled lemon chicken skewers and king crab/guacamole wonton cups with Sauvignon Blanc. Salad course was butternut squash salad with Chardonnay. Tomato, mushroom and radicchio risotto was paired with syrah. The main course was steak with eggplant ragu paired with the sold-out Cabernet Sauvignon. Dessert was an amazingly rich chocolate espresso lava cake paired with Bent Creek Port. It was well worth the $75/seat.

After all that, the “Any Port in a Storm” party was a touch washed out. We returned to hospitality, played a few more hands of Apples to Apples, and drank quite a bit of icewine. Any Port was just a bit too high in alcohol to go anywhere near at that point.

Sunday morning we cleared out, had a bit of breakfast, and made two winery stops. White Crane Winery was a fun little stop and a touch surprising. One of the tasting room volunteers turned out to be Veronica deCamp, the late L. Sprague deCamp’s granddaughter. She knew her granddad was a bit famous, but having a dozen people who knew him and his work show up was a surprise for her.

We also did a return visit to Bent Creek (because twice wasn’t enough) to pick up a few more bottles (the petit syrah is selling out).

Pat told us that Rich and Tom were working on the new Cabernet Sauvignon down at the winery, and showed us the path to follow. Power washers and fruit-flies tend to take a bit of the romance out of winemaking, but seeing the fermenting bins of fruit and the equipment was fun.

Original plans included an afternoon of Goofy Golf, but by then we were all goofed out. We had a quick closing ceremonies in the hotel lobby, and went our separate ways.

TeslaCon (VintaCon 2005) was: David Gallaher (facilities and transportation) and Spring Schoenhuth (registration and accounting), Kevin Roche and Andy Trembley (programming, winemaker liaisons and hospitality), Martin Armgstrong and Diana Vick, Morgan Chapman, Dave Clark, Nancy Cobb, John McBain and Karole Ishida, Fred Moulten, Gerry Nordley and Gayle Wiesner (designated driver #2), John and Chris O’Halloran and Cindy and Gavin Scott.

Fabulandia: Is it Art or is it Science Fiction?

By Jack Avery
Editor

I don’t claim to be an art critic. I know nothing about modern art. I am however a science fiction critic.

So while I’m not qualified to render a judgment on whether the art exhibited in the Fabulandia: Terra show at The Lab is great modern or post modern art, I can look at whether it is good science fiction.

The show, which focuses on the vegetation of a future Earth, continues through October 29. Admission is free.

The center of the gallery is taken up by three works by James Sansing that use the building’s load bearing columns, or the lack of one in once case, as the center of the piece.

His Melting Column began at the ceiling where he has constructed a fake drop ceiling, collapsing around one of the pillars. The work continues down the pillar as he uses white paint to represent the melting effect, as the pillar seemingly has started to flow out onto the surrounding floor.

The second “pillar” is “Invisible Column” which uses wires and a square footprint to create negative space to denote a pillar where it seems one should be.

The third artwork is “Support System” which uses the pillar as a support for an intricate multilevel diorama of ruin and decay. The various levels are connected by rods, pipes and seemingly precarious columns of bricks. Dead flies and crab exoskeletons and bits of dead plants decorate the different levels. The slightly above head-level crabs in particular are disconcerting as they appear ready to drop onto the viewer.

While interesting, I didn’t quite understand how Sansing’s art fit into the theme of the exhibit.

In contrast to the organic decay present in Sansing’s work, David Hamill’s Ideological Reconstruction Series utilizes 3-D CAD programs to create drawings of clean, artificial forms that evoke both architectural designs and living crystal structures. He uses math formulas to begin the sequences and allows the computer to “grow” the design based on the numbers he inputs into the formulas. Like a true life form, the result seems both random and patterned at the same time. The best of these had an Eischer-like quality, combining order and chaos, producing sequences that evoked futuristic space constuctions.

Genevieve Quick had two very different pieces in the exhibit. The first, TerraVision, was a cabinet constructed in the form of an old-fashioned television set. Within the screen, a misty and indistinct image of an alien landscape scrolled by. The second, Wunderland, was a diorama of a piece of alien landscape that seemed to float out from the wall where it was attached at eye level. The diorama held a multicolored array of lichen-covered rocks and organic slime. Seeing it, I thought of modern xenobiology and the theory that we should look at the more inhospitable places on earth, such as superheated volcanic undersea vents, to find out what life might be like on other planets.

Carrie Lederer’s “Offering” was the most elaborate, and the most artificial, of the artworks on display. Occupying a corner of the room, the piece contained fractal-decorated egg-like objects hanging from the ceiling and many nick-nacks and objects placed very orderly on astroturf mats cut in shapes. It was interesting to look at, but I didn’t get it.

The most striking and imposing work, by Tonya Solley Thornton, is also the most clearly in the classic science fiction tradition. It’s no surprise that in her comments on her work, she invokes a desire to create a sense of wonder in her audience.

Her work is a pair of large plants, of unearthly shape with sentient characteristics. The larger plant bends its “head” toward the smaller as if communicating. A motor provides a slight, but more than vegetable movement while a quiet music box tinkle emanates from the “elder” plant.

There is meant to be an intelligence here, whether benevolently or not, I couldn’t help thinking of Triffids and those brain-numbing plants from that Star Trek episode.

Philip Ross’s drawings of plant support systems, essentially enhanced terrariums, also posed science fictional questions about what it takes to support life artificially in an adverse environment. From information on display, it appears he has actually built some of these systems, but only a photo and drawings were on display here.

The one connection between all of these artworks is that the plant life they represent is all manifestly artificial. The large plants of Thornton’s work are clad in obviously fake plastic foliage and upholstery and are sitting on a flat artificial surface. Wunderland’s multi-colored lichen is the sort of material usually found in model railroad track layouts or Warhammer battlefields. Everything is obviously plastic, obviously fake. Ross’s plants might be real, but they couldn’t exist without artificial means of support.

Fabulandia: Fauna, which looks at the creatures that populate the future, will open in January.

The Lab is located at 2948 Sixteenth Street, a couple of blocks off of Mission, in San Francisco. The gallery is open Wednesdays through Saturdays from 1-6 p.m.

A good ghost story is always aided by being told in an appropriately spooky setting. A good example of this is the ongoing ghost story readings being held Saturdays through Halloween weekend at the Haas Lilienthal House in San Francisco.

The house, built in 1886, is the sort of Victorian mansion where countless ghost stories have been set and in fact, with the house decorated for Halloween, could easily be used as a set for an old-fashioned horror movie.

Last Saturday, docent/actress Cameron Galloway, sitting in the darkened second parlor of the house, read a handful of terror tales to a small group of intrepid souls.

The evening began with a light snack and a glass of white wine in the basement, following which the group was led upstairs.

Galloway began with Algernon Blackwood’s “The House From The Past”, reading in a light ethereal voice. She continued with stories by local author Mark Romyn, including “Afterlife” which contained a new take on the zombie theme and ended with an improvised telling of traditional ghost tale “The China Doll”.

Choosing stories for the readings proved difficult as many of the classic tales were either too long to be read in one sitting or were difficult to read because of their verbose period prose.

Both the storyteller and the stories will change for future readings. Authors under consideration include Poe, Lovecraft and Bierce.

San Francisco Architectural Heritage is offering flashlight tours of the house on Fridays through Halloween weekend, children’s scary story events on Saturday afternoons and the ghost story readings at 8 p.m. on Saturday nights.

LiveJournal is excellent for getting everything out there for the world to see, so it would go well with all the costumers that inhabit the world. Several Cosplay groups who settled on LJ to exchange photos and talk about the world of costuming have come to my attention, despite the fact that I wasn’t looking for it.

The first one I came across was Cosplay Hotness (cosplay_hotness). It’s a group where a good-sized chunk of the LJers who are into the anime costuming that also LJ are known to post. It’s mostly photos, and there’s not a lot of drama, which is a plus for any community. Some of the photos are fantastic, including a recent photo posted by San Jose’s own Cowardlykitten. It’s a nice overview community where you can really see a lot of the work that’s being done around the country.

One of my favourite personal journals that discusses costuming is Johnna Mead’s LJ (britgeekgrrl). I met her when I was MCing the Masquerade at BayCon and quickly added her to my friends list. It turns out that she’s a fine costumer and is one of the few who regularly talks about the nuts and bolts of making costumes. She often discusses her troubles with individual pieces, the difficulty working with some costumes, and she just rants about things once in a while. At times I think I learn more about the craft of costuming from reading Johanna’s post than I do from looking at all the other sites combined.

If you’re a MySpace person, there’s not a lot of costuming groups. Sure, there are a metric ton of Busty-Babe groups, but costuming groups are rare. My personal favourite is Costuming & Prop Fanatics. The chatter isn’t as frequent as the LJ groups, but there’s a lot of ideas and a nice place to post photos and get some advice.

Of course, on LJ, there’s always the largest of the costumers communities, con_costuming. It’s a huge community, mostly maintained by LJ Ghod, JohnO. Many of the folks whose journals I regularly read are up there, and there are often really solid advice, but sometimes it gets a little bogged down with all the traffic that goes through. The costuming community is somewhat better, with slightly more photos. There’s a large cross-over between the two.

Other Cosplay Bloggers to look out for:

- Nancy of Tracy is LJ’s Pegasusmaiden
- Dany of San Francisco (whose birthday is October 20th, one day before mine) is laragoth
- Jennifer Wylie is IAmRadar on LJ
- lionboogie represents Milpitas and can also be read at http://www.usagichan.com/
- luckinspades out of San Ramon also happens to be a regular con Dealer’s Room fixture.
- reikofanel is out of Martinez and also has a wonderful Artist’s page at http://reikofanel.deviantart.com/

Trey Haddad, President
Nathan Slerm-r & Chris Garcia, Vice-President
Dave Gallaher, Treasurer
Galen Tripp, Sargent at Arms
Barbara Johnson-Haddad, Secretary

Began at 8:02 pm
18 people attended

Secretary’s report: the minutes of meeting 793 were accepted as “crackers”
Treasurer’s report was that last week we took in $23.25

VP reports = preeminent VP Nathan reported that the BASFA party was a great success - thank you Ed! [we applauded]; then Chris reported that he is an official hoax candidate for mayor of San Jose & that a new “Drink Tank” is out.

The President reported that the Browncoats have our party stuff & we still need a regular party maven.

The party committee reported that the spent the money we raised last week and they made up the rest they spent - and that the money raised at the party was donated to Silicon’s charity - the Diabetes Society of Santa Clara.

Ed volunteered to be the permanent BASFA party maven and we gleefully accepted. Yay Ed!

Announcements:
Kevin announced that tomorrow is the 60th anniversary of IBM Research
Chris reminded us that we had been thinking of decorating an Xmas tree for the city and were we still interested & he will investigate details; then he announced he is one of the 3 editors for “Science Fiction/ San Francisco now.
Reviews:
I reviewed Silicon as I enjoyed the convention and was glad the newsletter worked out; reviewed “Advent Children” as a movie well worth full price twice & reviewed “Wallace & Grommet - Cure of the Wer-Rabbit” as silly and fun and worth full price - and that it had better acting in it than in many of the summer movies I’ve seen this year.

Kevin reviewed the Silicon premiere of “Ready, Steady, Sew” as the showing went well.

Andy reviewed “SiWire” as nicely laid out, easy to read & that it had useful information now and then.

Ed reviewed “Serenity” as really great & reviewed Silicon as lots of fun & needs to grow bigger & he enjoyed his party there a whole lot.

Chris reviewed Silicon as he was terrified of the new parking gates but thought it a good smaller convention & well-programmed & he missed seeing the Stargate (drat!).

Andy reviewed Silicon’s night life as great & better than Baycon’s.
Nathan mentioned he had so much fun at the Silicon parties Friday night that he couldn’t move the next day - until the afternoon when he went back & thought it was worth full price - plus the cost of tickets to Robo-nexus that he forgot to go to

Dave G reviewed Silicon as fun
Trey reviewed Silicon as fun, but a little sparse.

Ed announced a book signing at The Other Change of Hobbit, Tuesday night, 7pm with John Ringo - so go there

Dave G reviewed driving in Campbell with the train gates malfunctioning as not worth full price & Dace C follow-on’d that because of this he had a tour of downtown Campbell.

We adjourned at = 8:55 p.m.

And the rumor of the week was “there will be a new anthology called ‘Alternate Campbells’.”
October 17, 2005

Began at 8:04 p.m.
20 people attended.

Secretary's report: the minutes of meeting 794 were accepted as 'Kevin-gifted'.

No Treasurer [who is recovering from Vinticon] & no treasurer's report.

VP reports = pre-eminent VP Chris reported that his VP report is online at www.; no Nathan.

The President managed to avoid reporting.

We said ‘hi’ to our latest member Geo [who put his $5 in the jar, but the membership forms were not present].

Joanie moved to establish a Further Confusion party fund jar & it passed 'lots to 1'.

Julie reported that she spoke to Mike Wallace about the BASFA mailing list problems and Michael told her his official stance was that anyone with a mailing list problem should call him [408-396-9037].

The Sports Committee reported that he managed to see a Sharks game in Chicago.

Announcements:
Pam announced that she has photos from Silicon - so look at them.
Chris announced there will be a new SFSF this Wednesday.

Reviews:
Harold reviewed ‘Good Night and Good Luck’ as excellent, a fair piece of history & worth full price to a liberal; Dave C follow-on’d that it was a decent period film, using good archival footage & recommends it as worth full price & Anne Coulter can go get stuffed; Chris reviewed a story for how the main actor had auditioned for the role.

Chris also reviewed ‘Capote’ as an absolutely fantastic little film.

Dave C reviewed ‘Vinticon 2.5’ [held in Livermore at the Courtyard Marriott] as a good time was had by all & they all learned that ‘don’t try for 5 vineyards in 1 day - 4 is just about right’. That they had a run time & the winemaker’s dinner was very filling & good - recommending it as worth full value. [There was then some discussion of the doneness of the beef & that the central committee is looking for suggestions for next year.]

Andy stated his review of Vinticon will be in SFSF.

Julie reviewed a Nova program on Einstein as relatively good and well worth the time spent watching.

Kevin S reviewed his business trip to Chicago as including a chance to see the Sharks play the Blackhawks & he had a lot of fun, even if the Sharks lost, especially when sitting at center ice & he drove up to East Troy Wisconsin to see the East Troy electric railroad. He had the chance to ride in a just-restored railcar & thought it worth the day’s trip - recommends it & he experienced a captive oasis on the toll-way back to Chicago as he learned they work in only one direction - and to bring lots of coins for the tolls.

Harold reviewed seeing the Sharks play at home against the Blackhawks, where the Sharks won, as worth full price.

Diedre reviewed RubyCon [for the ruby programming language] as about 200 attended, that they had to turn away some people this year & it’s interesting to see a tech shift begin.

Let it be known that Dave C did not scamper, he frolicked.

And Trey decided it should be Kevin R & Kevin S.

We auctioned off a lot of books for = $0.50; $2.00; $0.25; $0.25; $0.50; and we birthday-auctioned off Chris to himself for $11.00.

We adjourned at = 9:15 p.m.

And the rumor of the week was ‘Illinois = land of the iron bladder’.
This is not a complete list of resources, as time goes by and we discover more resources, this list will grow.

If you know of a resource not listed, please send the information to sfinsf@gmail.com for inclusion in future issues.

   The Madame of a once illustrious house is falling apart as the source of her livelihood is becoming called into question: people from the Throwaway Caste must kill themselves for the sake of the Chosen Caste’s future.
   Darkly humorous, this play by Peggy Powell takes place in the distant future at the intersection of poverty, privilege, and paranoia. Join us as we step into another time and place, guided by music and mayhem.

Wednesdays-Saturdays
Through October 29
Fabulandia: Terra Opening Reception
Artists: David Hamill, Carrie Lederer, Philip Ross, James Sansing, Tonya Solley Thornton and Genevieve Quick
The LAB
2948 16th Street
San Francisco
p: 415.864.8855
6 p.m. - 9 p.m.
Gallery Hours: Wednesdays-Saturdays, 1-6 p.m.

   From the website:
   “Fabulandia is a two-part exhibition that speculates on the world of the future. A fantastical place, filled with new strains of plants and odd creatures that inhabit a mysterious landscape barely recognizable as planet Earth. The first in the Fabulandia series, Terra, presents the work of six artists envisioning this futuristic environment - an overloaded world that meshes the natural with the artificial in a landscape filled with sleek urban-scapes, extraordinary gardens and terrains of the impossible. Rather like an analog vision of a digital future, the exhibition ranges from carefully rendered works on paper depicting futuristic plants and structures to post-apocalyptic landscapes made from plumbing supplies and motorized shrubbery. Welcome to a place called Fabulandia, where low-tech and high-tech collide in a hybridized vision of the future.

“Fabulandia: Fauna opens in January 2006 with a look at the drastically altered creatures that populate the terrain of Fabulandia.”

Ongoing through March 12, 2006
Gross, Gruesome and Gothic
Cartoon Art Museum

San Francisco, CA 94105
Phone: 415/CAR-TOON, 415/227-8666

Hours: Daily 11:00 - 5:00, Closed Monday
Admission Prices:
$6.00 - Adults
$4.00 - Students & Seniors
$2.00 - Children (ages 6 - 12)
FREE - Children (age 5 & below)
The first Tuesday of every calendar month is “Pay What You Wish Day.”

From their website:
“From the darkest depths of the cartoon vaults comes the Cartoon Art Museum’s latest exhibition, Gross, Gruesome and Gothic. This horrifying display features over 50 original cartoons from a wide array of artists and comics, from spine-tinglers to rib-ticklers and everything in between.

“Exhibition highlights include:
“Masters of the Macabre: Edward Gorey, Charles Addams and Basil Wolverton Three of the most influential humorists of all time present their unique views of the world around us in a selection of comics and illustrations dating back to the 1920s.

“Spotlight on Gahan Wilson: This creator spotlight focuses on Gahan Wilson, one of the most celebrated and respected cartoonists of our time. In the past half-century, Wilson’s distinctive cartoons and illustrations have graced the pages of The New Yorker, Nickelodeon, Playboy and National Lampoon. In 2005, Wilson received the coveted Milton Caniff Lifetime Achievement Award from the National Cartoonists Society, one of the highest honors that a cartoonist can achieve.

“Scared Silly! Scary comics don’t always take themselves seriously. Bongo Comics’ annual Treehouse of Horror special features The Simpsons as you’ve never seen them before, as illustrated by Sergio Aragonés, Peter Kuper, Bill Morrison, Scott Shaw and Jill Thompson; Batton Lash’s Supernatural Law warns us to beware the creatures of the night...and their lawyers; and Charles Schulz’s classic comic Peanuts asks the burning question, “When will the Great Pumpkin arrive?”

“It came from the Seventies! As the Silver
Age of comics came to an end, the Marvel, DC and Warren publishing companies unleashed a wave of horror comics that pushed the boundaries of comic book art. Alfredo Alcala, Jim Aparo, Frank Brunner, Gene Colan and Dick Giordano, among others, bring new life to classic characters from Dracula and Frankenstein’s monster to anti-heroes including The Spectre, Vampirella and Morbius, The Living Vampire.

“Nothin’ But Misery: The Goon by Eric Powell  Powell is the Eisner Award-winning creator of Dark Horse Comic series The Goon, a horror comedy that pits the title character and his pal Frankie against killer robots, zombies, Spanish-speaking lizards and other supernatural menaces.”

575 10th Street
Between Bryant and Division
San Francisco
$18-$69

I don’t know what’s wrong with people who think that having an uninformative website is the way to promote their event.

Reading between the lines, this show runs Thursdays through Sundays. Curtain time is too much to ask for, although we are told there are two shows nightly on October 29, 30 and 31. Jill Tracy and The Malcontent Orchestra are probably playing those dates, and perhaps the other dates as well.

They don’t want to make it easy to buy tickets either.

The $69 tickets are for the Deluxe Shock Box seats for two.

Weekends through October 30
Batman!!! The TV Show: The Play
www.darkroomsf.com
The Darkroom
2263 Mission St. (b/t 18 & 19)
San Francisco
Fri. and Sat. 7:30 p.m.
Sun. 3 p.m
$15.

From their website:

“Impossible productions presents BATMAN!!! The TV Show: The Play, an original episode and campy tribute to Bob Cane’s suave crime fighters and the copastic 60′s TV show that made us love them.

“Pandemonium reigns when the theft of a molecular mass divisor signals the first domino to fall in a nefarious crime wave to topple the noble city of Gotham. Who will rescue the fair citizens of this great metropolis?!?! Holy obvious set up, old chum!! It’s none other than that dynamic duo Batman and Robin, the caped crusaders of justice, freedom and tortured aphorisms!

“But will they succeed when arch-super-master-criminals, the Joker, the Rid-dler, Catwoman and the Penguin-four of Gotham’s most fiendish and fearsome foes?!?!? And what happens when Aunt Harriet secret shenanigans land her in the middle of their salacious schemes?!?!? Does the Joker’s plot device spell out a tragic ending for the Caped Crusader and Boy Wonder?!?! It will take every ingenious gadget in their utility belts, every spare scrap of spandex and every entry in their thesauruses to thwart these dastardly evil-doers as they aim to steal the world’s first supercomputer. Will our heroes fare well? Or will it be a Bat-tastrophe?!?!”

Through November 19

Runs Fridays and Saturdays

There Be Monsters!

EXIT Cafe
156 Eddy Street
San Francisco
8:30 p.m.
$12-$20

From their website:

“A Forgotten Man and a Gremlin Chorus present a passionate excursion into unseen realms, descending a dark staircase to a land that falls somewhere between a Pre-School Easter Pageant and a Murderous Nightmare!

“Presented somewhat in the manner of a turn-of-the-century Magic Lantern show of worlds within worlds, There Be Monsters! with its absurdist multiple-character monologues, slides, puppets and mechanical creatures (including a monkey astronaut, a sleeping pig, a dead Elvis waiting on the Highway of Eternity, and Jesus, paired with a hallucinatory, evil monkey named Jungle Belle) delves into the logic of dreams and the nature of childhood perceptions regarding the discovery of things unknown.

Through November 12, 2005

Machbeth

Thursday, Friday, Saturday evenings at 8 p.m.
Sundays, October 24 and 30 at 2 p.m.
and November 6 at 7 p.m.

Town Hall Theatre
3535 School Street
Lafayette
(925) 283-1557

Adults $19-$25
Seniors and Youths $18-$23

The performance on Monday, October 31 is a benefit performance and tickets are $50 per person.

From their website:

“Town Hall Theatre Company presents Shakespeare’s Macbeth in a unique vision by acclaimed director, Kevin T. Morales. The classic tragedy takes a contemporary turn in time for Halloween with witches, ghosts, murder, swordplay and betrayal in Morales’s comic book version. Costumer Melissa Paterson and Acalanes High School Choir Director Bruce Lenacher also bring their unique talents to this one-of-a-kind production.”

“Morales’ Macbeth offers artists in the community a way to collaborate -- musicians, painters, choirs, dancers and wonderful professional, community and teen performers put on a show that captures the community’s imagination and creates a major theatrical event. Never before will a Shakespeare show seem so much like a roller coaster -- and include a rock band with teen choir, samurai swords decorated like skate boards, bags of candy and masked marauders.”

Thursday-Saturday, 8 p.m.
Sunday, 2 p.m.
$20
Running as part of the Gamelan festival, there are traditional shadow plays being performed the week prior to this performance.
From their website:
“For the festival’s second week, ShadowLight, Larry Reed and Gamelan Sekar Jaya team up to offer the world premiere of A(Balinese)Tempest, an interpretation of Shakespeare’s well-known play inspired by the mythology and arts of Bali. Integrating the best of ancient shadow theater traditions with 20th-century cinematic and theatrical techniques, this original work will utilize projections on a giant 30’ x 15’ screen, live dancers, and an original “soundtrack” performed by Gamelan Sekar Jaya, composed and arranged by guest music director I Made Terip. The ephemeral magic of shadows is an ideal medium for the evocative images and lyrical text of Shakespeare’s last play.”

From their website:
“Back out of the coffin by popular demand - it’s the monster show! Reprising the successful 2003 exhibition that first launched the monster theme at Creativity
Explored, studio artists will explore ghouls and goblins from the movies and their imaginations. Writer Michael Bernard Loggins explores what it means to be considered a “monster” by others in his piece.

“Presenting a special Halloween exhibition of artwork by artists with developmental disabilities at San Francisco’ s Creativity Explored. The gallery becomes a veritable who’s who of horror with a King Kong diorama, a simulated underwater installation featuring the Creature from the Black Lagoon, and ceramic busts of such favorites as the Bride of Frankenstein, the Wolfman and more.”

home.earthlink.net/~kpenley/circus.htm
NOHspace
2840 Mariposa Street
(between Florida and Alabama Streets)
San Francisco
8 p.m.
$12-$15

From their listing:
“Not the More Lovely is a circus ride through the manic grin of polite society into a subterranean world of ferals, glamours and the insistent mutterings of magic trying to find it’s way out. Loosely based on a new telling of the Pandora’s Box myth, it is a carnivalesque physical theater show with poetic text, animation by Sean Jones, music by Greg Giles and 20 Minute Loop, Ian Robertson, and Tunnel of Love, and the lovely performance work and invention of Gary Dailey, Liz Jahren, Karen Penley, Carrie Peters, Janaki Ranpura, Julie Reid and Jeff Wagner.

“The story will be told through a dreamscape of half remembered images dredged up from the sub- and unconscious, small jewels glinting in the dark. It is a land where gargoyles and imps lick up their delicious and the small sad bursts into bloom.”

A live performance of the musical episode of the TV show. Buffy and the Scoobies find themselves breaking out into song and baring their deepest secrets while fighting vampires and demons. Costumes encouraged.

Somebody write us a review of this. I want photos! I want to hear about a fan outing! Get going!

OK, perhaps this isn’t science fiction, but it’s just weird enough that I’m going to include it. From their website:
Strange creatures, bizarre phenomenon, dark and unholy activity in the dead of night...
Some may call it the Halloween season, but for the Shadow Circus Creature Theatre it’s just another Friday night in San Francisco...
The Bay Area’s most belligerent puppetry troupe opens at Madame Maraschino’s House of Burlesque... Excuse me... GORElesque... That’s right, folks, come for the Puppet Show, stay for the dancing girls...
Eh, who am I kidding? Come for the dancing girls, stay for the dancing girls... go to the bar while the stupid puppet show is happening. Did I mention there were dancing girls?
And what dancin’ girls they are!

The Hermetic Order of Arcana presents a live radio play:
Notebook Found in a Deserted House
Borderlands Books
866 Valencia Street
San Francisco
www.borderlands-books.com
8:30 p.m.
Free
The Hermetic Order of Arcana will proudly present a “live radio play broadcast” of a new adaptation of Robert Bloch’s classic horror short story from 1951, “Notebook Found in a Deserted House,” at Borderlands Books. This presentation is the second radio drama that Borderlands has hosted with the Hermetic Order Of Arcana, following last year’s successful radio adaptation of H.P. Lovecraft’s “Shadow Over Innsmouth”. The Hermetic Order Of Arcana is dedicated to preserving and paying homage to the memory of great horror and mystery writers throughout the ages within the classic medium of the radio drama, and are greatly honored to have the opportunity to share the legacy of California horror writer Robert Bloch, who is perhaps best known for his chilling characterization of a schizophrenic serial killer in his classic horror novel PSYCHO, which was adapted by Alfred Hitchcock in the internationally famous film of the same name. “Notebook Found in a Deserted House,” originally published in Weird Tales in 1951, is a classic horror story to fanatics of the genre, and was once named by British horror heavyweight Ramsey Campbell as “the most important story in horror fiction since the work of acclaimed horror pioneer H.P. Lovecraft”. The tale examines a chilling account of otherworldly monsters and their horrendous activities as seen through the eyes of a twelve year old boy in the deep woods of a desolate rural community, and his daring attempt to comprehend and finally escape an inevitable encounter at Halloween with the very source of his nightmares that, one by one, takes away the members of his family in a scene of gruesome ritualistic sacrifice.
Bloch’s “Notebook Found in a Deserted House” has been adapted for radio by the Hermetic Order Of Arcana’s co-founder and artistic director, RW Hessler, is produced by co-founder Thomas Lynch, and will feature many of the old-fashioned elements of radio drama production as popularized by pioneers of the genre such as the great Orson Welles and his Mercury Theatre Group. This particular “live broadcast” will also feature a live original score by Bay Area musicians Jon Fellman and Jefferson Parker, who have been active members of the local music scene for the past sixteen years.

“Irena Dubrovna, a beautiful and mysterious Serbian-born fashion artist living in New York City, falls in love with and marries an average Joe. Their marriage suffers though, as Irena believes that she suffers from an ancient curse—whenever emotionally aroused, she will turn into a panther and kill.”
The remake shows at 12:45 p.m., 4:30 p.m. and 8:30 p.m.
“In this highly stylized, erotic remake of the 1942 classic, the locale is New Orleans.
A young woman’s sexual awakening brings horror when she discovers her urges transform her into a monstrous black leopard. When smitten with a charming zookeeper, she refuses to embrace her destiny: the curse of the Cat People.”

Back in San Francisco once again and meeting for brunch midway though October will find us in Haight-Ashbury. Crepes on Cole is located conveniently at the first stop after the N-Judah line comes out of the tunnel under Buena Vista. To arrive on time for brunch take the N-Line that leaves Embarcadero at 10:27 a.m. or the next one at 10:38 a.m. and ride almost to the doorstep of the restaurant.

As always please RSVP to either mishalak at livejournal.com or aiglet at livejournal.com by midday Friday so that we might make a reservation for the party or else call 415-786-4303 before the meeting.

Afterwards thought is that we will explore a bit of the Haight or else go to Treasure Island if the weather is really nice.

The Thing

Castro Theater
429 Castro Street
San Francisco

Compare Howard Hawks’ and John Carpenter’s very different interpretations of John W. Campbell’s classic short story “Who Goes There.”

The classic shows at Noon, 3:45 p.m. and 7 p.m.

“In Howard Hawks’ production of the story “Who Goes There?” an arctic expedition discovers a spacecraft buried in the ice. They locate the frozen pilot and return to the base to thaw him out. All hell breaks loose when he’s revealed to be a blood-sucking alien!”

Then sit back and enjoy the modern version which shows at 1:45 p.m., 5:30 p.m. and 9:15 p.m.

“Scientists in the Arctic confront a shape-shifting alien that assumes the appearance of the people it kills. Carpenter re-imagined the 1951 classic as something darker, fiercer and all together more disturbing. Amazing make-up effects by Rob Bottin and indelible music by Ennio Morricone highlight this foreboding examination of paranoia pitted against brawn.

Hammer Horror Triple Feature
The Creeping Unknown 7 p.m.
The Revenge of Frankenstein 8:45 p.m.
The Vampire Lovers 10:30 p.m.

Castro Theater
429 Castro Street
San Francisco

Legendary British horror character Quartermass on the big screen in The Creeping Unknown.

“In Hammer’s first “Horror” production, Donlevy stars as Professor Quatermass, who must pick up the pieces after a space flight goes awry. Mysteriously, two of the astronauts are missing from their spacesuits, while the pitiful sole survivor, Carroon, begins to mutate into something...inhuman.”

The Revenge of Frankenstein:
“Hammer’s direct sequel to their smash hit, Curse of Frankenstein. This time, the enterprising Baron Frankenstein runs a medical clinic for the poor, where he mixes charity with amputation as he gathers parts for his new creation.”

The Vampire Lovers:
“Hammer spices up their gothic formula with undead lesbians and lots of nudity. In this adaptation of Sheridan LeFranu’s classic story, Carmilla has her eyes and fangs set on Smith, and it’s up to Peter Cushing to save her from a variety of fates worse than death.”

The Rolling Darkness Review with Peter Atkins, Michael Blumlein, and Glen Hirshberg kicks off our notorious Dusk ‘Til Dawn Scary Story Party - The Rolling Darkness Revue, a traveling fraternity of some of horror fiction’s premier talents, takes to the road this October to deliver thrills and chills in celebration of the genre’s favorite holiday. Launched last year to enthusiastic reviews and rapidly swelling audiences, the Rolling Darkness Revue is a multi-media experience which incorporates theatrical lighting and live music to provide much more than the usual bookstore reading. Join us to meet founding members Peter Atkins and Glen Hirshberg, who will be joined by local author Michael Blumlein.
As if that wasn’t enough...!
It has become a Halloween tradition here at Borderlands Books to gather everyone together and try to scare the pants off of each other. (With ghost and scary stories, to be exact -- no jumping out of closets, please!) The festivities begin at dusk (Saturday, October 29th at 6:41 pm) and end at dawn the next day (Sunday, October 30th at 6:06 am). Anyone can volunteer to read from one of their favorite (published) ghost or horror stories or opt to just sit back and enjoy the show as others share from their own selections. Sign-ups begin at dusk. Snacks and beverages will be provided by...
Borderlands Books. Start sifting through your favorite horror and ghost stories and prepare for our one-of-a-kind Halloween tradition!

San Francisco

From the Castro website:

“An old-time Matinee featuring a claw-full of vintage Horror Movie trailers and the 1936 Technicolor Cartoon, “Cobweb Hotel”, a Special Prize Drawing, and the original… Night of the Living Dead.

“When asked to name his favorite “Creature Features” movie, Bob Wilkins chose Night of the Living Dead. Although nearly four decades old, and the progenitor of a seemingly endless series of gore-soaked zombie extravaganzas, Romero’s original creature feature remains a stark, brooding and unrelenting shocker.”

The Comedy of Terrors 2:50 p.m.
The Abominable Dr. Phibes 4:30 p.m.
Castro Theater
429 Castro Street
San Francisco
With performances by Peter Lorre, Boris Karloff, Basil Rathbone and Joseph Cotton.
From the Castro Website:
The House of Usher:
“Phillip Winthrop journeys to a foreboding, mist-enshrouded manor to elope with Madeleine Usher despite the warning of their cursed bloodline by brother Roderick (Price). When Madeleine succumbs to sudden death, the secret of the Ushers begins to unravel towards its inexorable and horrific crescendo…”

The Comedy of Terrors:
“In this dark comedy, a desperate funeral director, Trumble (Price), begins “cultivating” a new clientele with his bungling assistant Gillie (Lorre). When Trumble’s Shakespeare-quoting Landlord (Rathbone), demands a year’s back-rent, the underhanded undertaker decides to bury his problem… permanently.”

The Abominable Dr. Phibes:
“Price shines in his signature role of Dr. Anton Phibes. Horribly disfigured in an automobile accident, Phibes targets the surgical team who allowed his wife to die. Flamboyantly he knocks off the medicos, baffles Scotland Yard, and celebrates in high art-deco style with his clockwork band.”

Macabre Masterpiece Double Feature

Curse of the Demon
Castro Theater
429 Castro Street
San Francisco
With Host Russ Tamblyn

The uncut U.K. version of Curse of the Demon will be shown at 7 p.m.

From the Castro website:
“M.R. James’ classic short story, “Casting the Runes”, becomes one of the all-time classics of fantasy cinema. Dr. Holden (Andrews), an American psychologist and supernatural debunker, loses his grip on rationality when confronted by Dr. Karswell (MacGinnis), a powerful satanic cult leader in England.”

Then at 9 p.m is The Haunting.

“The ultimate haunted house movie—accept no remakes. A team of parapsychologists investigates supernatural events at Hill House, and one of them seems to have a special connection to the spirits within. Terrific performances from the cast, with director Wise maintaining a claustrophobic atmosphere of disquiet using suggestion, shadow and sound to jangle nerves.”

Borderlands is excited to welcome Richard Morgan, acclaimed author of MARKET FORCES, BROKEN ANGELS, and ALTERED CARBON, a New York Times Notable Book and winner of the Philip K. Dick Award. Publishers Weekly offers this about Morgan’s latest novel, WOKEN FURIES: “In Morgan’s powerful third cyberpunk noir SF novel to feature Takeshi Kovacs, whose consciousness is transferred from one ultra–combat-ready body to another in the service of various unscrupulous powers, the interstellar mercenary returns home to Harlan’s World, thoroughly pissed and dangerous. Despite his justified cynicism, he finds himself trying to protect a young woman who may house the soul of a martyred revolutionary from centuries earlier. He also must fight a hired killer who’s a younger version of himself. To succeed, he has to sift through his past to see which allies and memories he can trust. Morgan has become even more nervy since winning the Philip K. Dick Award for his confident first novel, ALTERED CARBON (2003). This book develops a baroque, appallingly complicated setting, full of opportunities for revelation and betrayal. Both violence and sex are troweled on thickly but appropriately; they have significant consequences for these people who are trying—in circumstances even more desperate than our own—to discover who they really are and who they might have a chance to become.” Morgan’s career is really taking off -- come meet him before it’s too late to say you “knew him when”!

5353 Sunol Blvd.
Pleasanton
Waltz the night away in a romantic ballroom with the San Francisco Bay Area’s most glamorous Undead at the 12th Annual Le Bal des Vampires.
The evening will, as usual, feature truly haunting 18th, 19th, and 20th century ballroom dance music by Brazen Hussey, one of the most exciting dance bands around, equally at home playing classical music, vintage dance music, Celtic fusion, Swing, blues and hard rock. While the program, as usual, has a strong waltz bias, the program includes everything from elegant 18th century country and set dances to Viennese waltzes, polkas and mazurkas, to cool blues fox trot and tango to early Swing and classic Rock at this very eclectic Gathering of Kindred. As usual, all set dances will be taught or called at the ball.

Suggested costume is evening dress or dress uniform from the century and country of your “rebirth,” or modern evening dress. While there is no dress code for the ball (and we certainly don’t expect Spike to dress up for the occasion!), you will see some of the most gorgeously costumed guests of the social season at this ball.

The ball’s half-time show will be another cutting edge performance by Le Theatre des Vampires, the most feared theater company on the West Coast. Not recommended for the faint of heart.

For those wishing to learn or practice the dances before the ball, there will be an optional pre-ball dance workshop (details TBA).

Saturday, November 5

Historias del Desencanto (Stories of Disenchantment)

Castro Theater
429 Castro Street
San Francisco

Showing as part of the Latino Film Festival. In Spanish with English subtitles.

“In a limbo between centuries, the world is devastated by the Disenchantment. In this fantastical context, three characters meet in the labyrinths of their dreams: Ainda, a bat-winged artist; Diego, a filmmaker whose innocence resides in his belly button; and Ximena, an adolescent in full sexual awakening. Together, they experience a post-modern, gender-bending loss of sexual innocence in this mystical love story.”

San Francisco
7 p.m.
Free
Topic: From Spatial Awareness To Consciousness
It's hard to imagine how we would exist without spatial awareness, yet that is exactly what many patients with stroke and other forms of brain damage must do. The study of such patients has revealed new insights into the role that the perception of space plays in producing accurate descriptions of the world. Lynn Robertson, author of “Space, Objects, Brains and Minds” will discuss her work on spatial functions of the brain and their role in perceptual awareness.

About the Series: Ask a Scientist is a new and different kind of lecture series. If you love watching Nova specials and reading Scientific American at the doctor’s office, then this event is for you. Enjoy food, drinks, socializing, and conversation about the universe’s most fascinating mysteries!

A new 35 mm print of Barbarella.
“"The year is 40,000. Peacefully floating around in zero-gravity, Barbarella (Jane Fonda) is suddenly interrupted by a call from the President of Earth. A young scientist, Duran-Duran, is threatening universal peace and Barbarella is the chosen one to save the world. During her mission, she never finds herself in a situation where it isn't possible to lose at least part of her already minimal dressing.

In a double feature with Danger: Diabolik, the 1967 movie based on the European comic.

“In psychedelic swinging 60s style, the dreaded thief (and killer) Diabolik wreaks havoc on a generic European country for his own financial gain and amusement. With his curvaceous, superficial girlfriend (displaying awesome powers of wig-wearing) they deed dirty. See them face off against bumbling cops and revenge-seeking mafiosos to an indelible score by Ennio Morricone.”

Brenda Wong Aoki and Mark Izu present Mermaid Meat: The Secret to Immortality and other Japanese ghost stories.
I can't recommend this highly enough. See my review in issue two of the performance of Black Hair at the SF Theater Festival. In addition to the title story and Black Hair, they will also be performing The Bell of Dojoji, Dancing in California and a new work.
Aoki is a wonderful performer, using her voice and acting skills to bring to life traditional Japanese ghost stories with Izu providing musical accompaniment.
I suspect that Mermaid Meat is based on the same traditional story that Rumiko Takahashi used as the basis for her Mermaid Forest manga so anime fans might be particularly interested in this show.

Borderlands’ customers were some of the first fantasy readers in the United States to go crazy for Steven Erikson’s MALAZAN BOOKS OF THE FALLEN -- and now you can meet the author. From Books at Transworld: “His debut fantasy novel, GARDENS OF THE MOON, was acclaimed for its combination of originality and intelligent, strong and exciting storytelling, singling out its author as a writer destined to rank alongside . . . giants of the genre. The first in a truly epic series chronicling the ill-fated Malazan Empire, GARDENS OF THE MOON also took the internet by storm and had fans falling over themselves to praise this brilliant debut.” Erikson will be signing copies of the third book in the series, the US hardcover of MEMORIES OF ICE. Don’t miss this rare opportunity to meet the world-maker in person!

The Phantom of the Opera Ball PEERS Event
Masonic Lodge of San Mateo
Doors Open: 7:00 p.m.
Dance lesson: 7:15 p.m.
Dancing begins: 8:00 p.m.
Tickets: $15.00 in advance (by February 28)
At the door: $20.00

Don’t let those wild rumors of an Opera Ghost keep you from attending the social event of the season, the Opera Ball of the Paris Opera Populaire. This is destined to be the most spectacular of all our masquerade balls and Management assures you that “Everything is under control.”

Our special guests - Monsieur Frank Beau Davis, that American trumpet virtuoso and his brilliant Brassworks Band from San Francisco, will play an evening of opera and ballet tunes arranged for ballroom dancing and brilliant Viennese Waltzes, polkas, mazurkas, schottisches, reels, and quadrilles. All set dances will be taught or called and there will a pre-ball dance class to help you brush up on your mid-Victorian dance skills. And, of course, they will play those perennial favorites, “The Congress of Vienna Waltz” and “Sir Roger de Coverley” (with a distinctly Wagnerian edge).

Suggested costume for this gala event is Victorian evening or ball dress (circa 1860’s-80’s), period fancy dress, or modern evening dress. Masks are strongly suggested.

The fashionable young gentlemen of the Jockey Club will be pleased to know that evening’s entertainment includes operatic and ballet excerpts by the company, including the premiere of the ballet from the controversial new opera “Sappho,” choreographed by the celebrated Mme. Giry for the Peerless Ballet.

Refreshments will be served throughout the evening (Since we lack the catering budget of the Paris Opera Populaire, your potluck contributions will be deeply appreciated).

Zorro

Berkeley Repertory Theater
written and performed by Culture Clash
The Roda Theatre
2025 Addison Street
Berkeley

From their website:

“California was born from a clash of cultures, and now Culture Clash explodes the romantic myths surrounding its creation. Following their 2002 hit, Culture Clash in AmeriCCa, these missionaries of mayhem return to Berkeley Rep with the world premiere of Zorro. Employing their usual irreverence, the trio takes on this legend to explore questions of homeland security in the Wild West—when Anglo-Americans struggled with such issues as Mexican immigration, Indian gambling and a governor born on foreign soil. At long last, it’s a Latin look behind the mask of this mainstream icon invented by an Irish American. Zorro rides out of the pages of pulp fiction, through the Hollywood image machine and beyond the barriers of class, race and ethnicity to become a hero for the oppressed in every land. Both history and histrionics play a role when Zorro is unsheathed!”

The Toon Town Hop

PEERS Event
Masonic Lodge of San Mateo
Doors Open: 7 p.m.
Dance lesson: 7:15 p.m.
Dancing begins: 8:00 p.m.
Tickets: $15.00 in advance (by March 25)
At the door: $20.00

From their website:

“As any cartoon aficionado can tell you, some of the best film music actually appears in cartoons. In celebration of the classic age of cartoons, we invite you to the Toon Town Hop, a vintage dance ball inspired by the best cartoon music of the 20th century.

“Suggested costume is vintage or modern evening dress (Mouse ears optional!).

Guests may also attend as their favorite cartoon character (vintage or modern!).

“The dazzlingly versatile Divertimento Dance Orchestra will play a multi-period program of beautiful and energetic dance music from both classic and modern cartoons. Dance classic waltzes and polkas, ragtime teens and 20’s dances, 30’s and 40’s Swing and fox trot, stirring marches, and a variety of other ballroom and set dances at this wildly varied event. For us diehard dancers, there will be DJ dance music of some truly off-the-wall but extremely danceable cartoon music during the intermissions.

“There will be a light buffet of T.V. snacks – everything your mother said was bad for you (and she was probably right) and complimentary non-alcholic drinks. Contributions to the buffet are, as always, very welcome. Intermission entertainment includes vintage dance performances by the Peers Flying CirCUS and a cartoon music sing-along.”
