I’ve been bad. I haven’t put an issue of The Drink Tank out for nearly a month. Why? Well, there’s the sudden eruption of my seeming to have a life, and the fact that I’m waiting for a little content. These things happen. I’ll get back on track and have The Cocktail Issue and This Were WorldCons soon enough. The last Drink Tank, 134, is on eFanzines.com.

If you haven’t been to eFanzines.com recently, I think you’re missing out. There’s a great issue of Vegas Fandom Weekly from Arnie Katz where he mentions that his mother recently passed away. I was terribly sorry to hear that. It also said that she was 92 or so, which is a good long life. The rest of the issue was the regular fantastic stuff, including a look at what Arnie considers the best zines ever. Of course, there are many that don’t show up, but what are you gonna do? My Australian buddy Bill Wright also has a nice article. Great lettercol finishes off a good issue.

John Coxon’s at it again. Issue 2 of Procrastinations is out and about and it’s good stuff. Highly sexual in parts, it’s one of the more interesting zines that I’ve seen in a while. English Wunderkind Coxon will be a big deal within a few years. We just gotta keep him motivated.

Speaking of the UK, the Year of the Teledu, a con-thingee, happened on the weekend of the 21st. Good things were said by all who attended.

Another zine that’s popped up on eFanzines.com, though only as a link, is Petra Mitchell’s PicoFarad. I first came across it at WorldCon last year and it’s a solid zine. There’s a new issue up with a lot of Harry Potter theming.

I would also like to say that I read Harry Potter in the week leading up to the release (due to having a good friend with very good connections) and then the audiobook. If you’ve never heard the Jim Dale audiobooks of the HP series, you must do so. It’s just damn good performance. I also had the honor of holding the information of what happens in the book over the head of a number of people. That was fun.

Prolapse, Peter Weston’s zine dealing largely with UK Fan History, released issue 7. It’s another great one. I’m very pleased that he’s coming out with them so frequently. I’m getting them as PDFs and I think they’re delightful.

Did I say that Pixel by Dave Burton deserves serious Hugo nomination consideration? Because if I didn’t, I really should have.

New File 770 is good stuff too. It’s got a good picture of me in it.

Yes, I’m running for TAFF and yes, the ballot will be out right about the time you read this and yes, I’ll have ribbons at NASFiC this weekend.

I’ll have more on the North American Science Fiction Convention in the next issue. I’m excited because I’ll get to meet a lot of folks from a part of the country that I’ve never really been to. Not a lot of West Coasters on the list that I’ve seen of folks going. There’s also Costume College the same weekend.

Who was at San Diego Comic-Con and wants to write it up?

No word on 2010 Westercon bids. I’m hoping for something soon.

Let me say, on my list of favourite BArena Mega-plexes, number one is the one in Valco (Cupertino Square I think they’re calling it now) and number two is the Century 25 in Union City: It’s huge and always packed, but the theaters are big and the screens huge. Number three is the lovely Dublin theatres with the IMAX. I’d never been there until I went on the 15th and had a lovely time. Good screens. None of them touch the Century (now Winchester) 21 and 22 theaters in my heart though.

Anyone going to LosCon? I’ll be there and would love to get a BArena dinner experience going!

We’ll be debuting the Babbage Difference Engine at the Computer History Museum in September. This is going to be the greatest BArena SteamPunk event in history! I’m being trained to run the thing and the opening will be a sight to be seen. I’ll post more as we get closer to the date, but it’s looking like it’ll be a wonderful time. I’m thinking that we’ll have a little gathering at some point just for Fen.

You know, I got food poisoning from a burrito I had at the San Jose Arena while watching The Great American Bash WWE pay-per-view. It was a good show, but man, did it do a number on me!

BASFA is still looking for a permanent home. Keep an eye on the BASFA.org website for where we’ll be meeting next.

I’m really digging Arcade Fire and Amy Winehouse right now. I’m just sayin’ is all.

Who’s on the Ballot?

Apparently, Kevin Standlee and I are the perfect combination when it comes to performing. Kevin’s certainly got that air of respectability that you need to pull off playing the straight man, and I, you may have noticed, am the ultimate bumbling baffoon. That combination worked for the BunnyFinches, Laurel & Hardy, Martin & Lewis, and especially for Abbott & Costello.

That last one is important. Their bit, “Who’s on First?” is likely the only Vaudeville routine that still gets regularly referenced. Cartoons and even an episode of Eight is Enough have mentioned it. It’s a classic bit. You even know how it goes, and both those guys were dead before you were born! (Probably. I’m spitballin’ about your age here.)

It’s never easy to explain the intricate details of how voting for Westercon site selection works. I’ve done a little bit of research and I only get about 40% of how these things work for WorldCon. And Westercon is actually a little more difficult. Folks were looking for a good way to introduce the site selection concept to the masses and be entertaining at the same time.

Enter SMoF and dramatist James Stanley Daugherty. He wrote a skit based around “Who’s on First?” that explained how the site selection thingee worked. It was a way of explaining the idea and making little gags along the way. His first thought for folks who would be interested in performing it: Tall Kevin and myself.

Genius casting if you ask me.

The weekend before the con, Kevin and I got together and did a read-through of the piece. As soon as we were done, Kevin said, completely accurately, “Yeah, we got this.” We did it for the gathered masses at the final Westercon staff meeting and it got a really good reaction. We were well on our way to giving a legendary performance.

Opening day of Westercon. I read through the bit a couple of times to make sure I got the breaks right. I also had some minor stomach problems, so I was late to do our sound check. We were ready to go, folks filed in and our Guests of Honor took the stage, led by the masterful Toast Lord Jay Lake. He said a few things and then introduced Kevin and me as Mr. Abbott and Mr. Costello. We got up to do the routine.

Once the audience understood what we were doing, they actually gave out a little groan. I totally understand that. There’s nothing worse than a retread of an old bit not done right (and there have been a lot of terrible versions of “Who’s on First?”) so I give them their instincts. We went into the early phases and got a couple of laughs for the little things. Our timing was pretty much dead-on, which is good. I had been working with the good people at the Charles Grodin Slow Burn Clinic to get my reactions down. Those were getting laughs far more than what I was saying. Kevin, playing straight the whole way, was the perfect set-up.

There was the break where we got into some SMoFish comedy stuff and that was what killed. Kevin delivered lines about how the Business Meeting would never do anything to complicate matters with such brilliant sincerity that I almost lost it. That got the perfect laugh, especially from Michael Siladi and Christian McGuire who were sitting right behind us. Kevin also did a long rhyming section and a piece where he explained In and Out of Zone bids that allowed me to do a bit of physical comedy and a pause that I think worked beautifully. I love when that happens.

We finished up with my head figuratively ‘plodin’ and me running off the stage with Kevin in pursuit, still trying to get me to understand what Site Selection was. It was well done (if I say so myself) and we got a very good reaction. I’d love to do it again sometime, but it’s not one of those things you can pull out anytime and do for folks. Maybe next year we’ll get a chance.
Letters Of Comment

John Purcell writes:

Well, hello again, young people! Good to see you’re still slaving away at this indispensable Bay Area fanzine and not letting post-con depression drag your energy level down the tubes. Keep those fan fires burning, young ‘uns!

Jean Martin responds:

It’s good to be back! It’s nice to know that we’re indispensable.

I really have to debate with Chris over his 2007 Fan Hugo nominee ruminations for next year’s WorldCon. And it comes a mere few weeks before we find out who’s gonna pull down all the silver rockets at this year’s WorldCon. Go figger.

Good luck to Chris and all the other nominees. I’m sure we’ll have the results in the pages of SF/SF as soon as they come out.

While I really appreciate Chris’s kind words about Askance being “on the bubble” of Fan Hugo consideration, I am surprised at one zine’s non-mention in his listing: Pixel. I don’t know about you or anybody else, but David Burton’s efforts in producing such a top-quality fanzine every month places his zine right up on my personal top five list. At the moment, I am leaning toward sending in supporting membership for Denvention 3 mainly to get the publications and have voting rights in the Fan Hugos.

Chris is most definitely right in that this year has seen some wonderful fanzines; I have no complaints about any of the other ones he mentions, but to not name Pixel in that list is a glaring omission. Of course, maybe he did that deliberately since he’s a regular columnist in that zine. That is a possibility. Even so, it is a zine deserving of the honor of being considered a potential best Fanzine Hugo. Quite a group of zines to be in with, too!

Thanks for all your suggestions. But, hey, what about SF/SF?

Also, what about Marc Schirmeister for Fan Artist? I totally love his style, and he’s produced a lot of good artwork this year already. I would nominate him along with Foster, Erichsen, Steffan and Stiles. That would be one tough category. The Fan Writer Hugo category is likewise wide open, IMHO. Names I would add to this list are James Bacon, Mark Plummer, and Robert Lichtman.

Personally, I would drop Ted White’s name from consideration because he is a fealty pro — or has been. The way I look at it here is that if you have ever sold writing professionally in the science fiction market and are a member of SFWA, then you should not be eligible for Fan Hugo awards. I consider the FAAn Awards much more responsive to just fan-oriented publications with voting among peers; besides, the FAAn Awards probably have much more personal meaning to fanzine fans than the Fan Hugos. But getting back to the names Chris has listed, here is another tough group of candidates to choose from.

I agree professionals shouldn’t be included in a Fan category.

Other than thanking you folks for the wonderful con and activity reports — plus all of the delightful photographs, of course — I have nothing much to add here except that I enjoyed it all. Thanks for the fun zine, and keep them coming.

We’re working on it!

Mike Deckinger writes:

Dear Chris,

You mentioned Walter Breen “being arrested for sexual abuse.” At the time of the Boondoggle, or Breendoggle, he had not served any time, however there were numerous allegations of unsavory activities surrounding him, particularly after his move from New York to California. Convention chairman Bill Donaho felt that permitting Breen’s attendance could subject younger members to possible danger, and might create a huge liability headache for the convention committee. (Dick Eney earlier referred to Breen as “Sticky Fan” in outlining a potentially unsettling situation, if he was permitted convention entry).

Shortly beforehand, Breen was blackballed from FAPA. It took a ridiculously small group to accomplish this, something like a dozen or fifteen members at the most. A petition was drafted immediately thereafter to reinstate him, circulated by Redd Boggs and others. (I don’t recall who the “others” were; my contact at the time was through Boggs.) I joined the majority of the membership who voted to reverse the Most of the blackballers were from the Maryland contingent. Breen’s strongest support was in the New York metropolitan area, where he was known as a congenial individual who frequently popped up at fan gatherings, chatted with wit and intelligence, and contributed mightily to the concentrated fanzine output. No one condoned child molestation, but we all found it desirable to give him the benefit of the doubt, and not entertain the notion that he could be a perpetrator.

It’s uncomfortable to stretch back that far. My dealings with him were always of the most refined nature. (He and Marion spent some time in my Newark, NJ apartment once: a pleasurable time was had by all). I saw him shortly before his first imprisonment. He was taking his daughter to dancing school near my San Francisco home. By then he had the graying Father-Time look. This being San Francisco, no one who saw him was jolted. He looked tired and sounded and seemed very resigned to the inevitable unpleasantries that followed.

I question the wisdom of resurrecting the Boondoggle and surrounding events, as it’s sure to evoke painful memories.

Jean Martin responds:
Thank you for writing to us with your side of things, Mike. We apologize for any painful memories this might have brought up for you.

San Francisco Science Fiction Conventions, Inc. (SFSFC) has voted to continue up to two scholarships of $500 to help convention runners in training attend the SMOFCon convention-runners convention in Boston MA this year over the weekend of December 7-9, 2007.

SMOFCon is an annual convention about organizing science fiction conventions. Subject matter ranges from managing small conventions up to the unique challenges of World Science Fiction Conventions. The convention is held in a different city each year. The 2007 SMOFCon will be in Boston MA at the Hilton Boston Logan Airport. More information about this year’s SMOFCon is available on their web site.

The SFSFC scholarships are open to anyone involved in running science fiction conventions, regardless of their place of residence; however, applicants must be able to demonstrate that their attendance at SMOFCon will benefit San Francisco Bay Area conventions. Applications will be judged by the scholarship administrators, who for 2007 are the three directors of SFSFC who have chaired Worldcons: David W. Clark, Kevin Standlee, and Tom Whitmore.

An application form is available at SFSFC’s web site or by writing to SFSFC at PO Box 61363, Sunnyvale CA 94088-1363. SFSFC must receive (postmark date does not count) applications by October 15, 2007.

This is the fourth year that SFSFC has issued scholarships to allow promising convention runners to attend SMOFCon.

The name “SMOF” stands for “Secret Masters Of Fandom,” and is a humorous reference to the people who organize and manage science fiction conventions. Another term sometimes used for such people is “conrunner.”

SFSFC was the parent non-profit corporation of ConJosé, the 2002 World Science Fiction Convention, and ConFrancisco, the 1993 Worldcon.

Hot time, summer in The City. FANAC continues unabated and the world turns closer to WorldCon, where they’ll announce that I’ve lost two Hugos.

I build my calendar around the placement of cons: Summer starts with BayCon and ends with WorldCon. This year, summer also includes NASFiC, Westercon and this thing called Con-X-Treme.

Frank Wu, Hugo-winning Fan Artist and good buddy of mine, has of late become dissatisfied with cons. He wrote that he thinks there may be too many, that the quality of them has dipped, that we’re not bringing in enough young folks. I’m not sure I agree with all of that, but I do agree with one thing: we need to make some changes.

I’m not talking about big honkin’ changes like redefining what a WorldCon is or what the Hugos do (though Best Fan Writer might need some reworking…), I’m talking about moving things along in new directions. Case in point: The Fanzine Lounge.

Traditionally, the Fanzine Lounge is a place with a bunch of tables, a ton of zines, and a few people sitting around talking, maybe reading. It’s almost always the same lot of people at each con. This year at BayCon, we broke that up a little and at Westercon we completely shattered it. There were always people around and the place was basically a party by 10 each evening. It was the kind of place you’d go to chat, maybe pick up one of the notebooks and draw (after I threatened you into doing so), and basically have a good time. There were regular fanzine fans like myself, young folks like Wendy Newton, non-stop party people, SMoFs, and various others. Everyone seems to have stopped by and had a sit and chatted folks up. It was a melting pot of the best kind.

And that’s part of what was so great about this year’s Westercon. It was so very different. There was a gaming room that was right next to the Fanzine Lounge and was jumping the entire con (though the Lounge did stay open a little later!). Filking was big on a couple of the nights too. These are not typically the most happenin’ places for a con, but Westercon was very different.

And that difference could lead us to the future. I’d love to see us working towards a new idea, a new-ish form where it’s no longer about emphasis, but about availability. There’s the idea that you need to appeal to the gamers to get admission numbers up, but you could get more folks (over time) by simply putting on a great con. By having a lot of options that are “open” instead of laser-focused, you can get more folks involved in more areas. The gaming didn’t feel like Gamers-Only. It felt like a place to sit, play a few games and have a good time (and I gotta give it up to Mike and his crew for being Awesome!). The Fanzine Lounge wasn’t just a place for Fanzine Fans. They were parts of a whole that got traffic and increased the overall impression of a good time.

Looking at SiliCon coming up and LosCon (where I’m taking my Fanzine Lounge Idea on the road) and eventually BayCon, I’m thinking that Fandom’s seldom been in this good a position. Frank is right, there probably are too many cons going on at once, thinning the number of people that can attend any one. Many of these are the tightly focused cons that don’t see much overlap with the others, but still, if there was only one game in town, you’d see a very different situation. I’d love to see a widening of the net that the General Interest cons throw, and for them to take a look at how everything can be made more generally accessible. Con is about community, and little communities within a con are fine, but imagine if you could get them all talking and partying together?

In other news, it looks like all those science fiction authors were right: we’re under attack from the squids.

That’s right, the Humboldt Squid, those magnificent underwater beasts that can grow to seven feet long, have been showing up in Northern and Central California waters, eatin’ our fish, and breeding. These things eat and kill quite effectively, mostly only stuff that’s

Local Author News
Local Writer Jeff Carlson has a new book out. “Plague Year” is set in post-apocalyptic California where nanotechnology designed to fight cancer has instead evolved into a nanotech plague that kills most life on earth. He is doing a number of signings at area bookstores in August.

San Francisco science fiction author Frank Robinson’s short story “Two Weeks in August” was adapted as a radio-style drama and performed by the Pulpcon Players at the recently concluded convention for pulp collectors in Dayton, Ohio.

The Hugo Award-winning author is himself a pulp collector and past guest of honor at the convention, but he was unable to attend this year as he is completing work on his latest novel.

Passings
Fantasy film actor and long-time San Francisco resident Kerwin Mathews, perhaps best known for his portrayal of Sinbad in The Seventh Voyage of Sinbad, passed away July 5 at his home in San Francisco.

Mathews starred in such fantasy films and TV as Space Patrol, The Seventh Voyage of Sinbad, Saffo Venere de Lesbo, The Three Worlds of Gulliver, Jack the Giant Killer, Ghostbreakers, Upon retiring from acting in 1978, he became an antiques dealer in San Francisco, occasionally appearing at film conventions.

Bay Area Fan News
Prominent local artist and fan Frank Wu will be showing his animated film Guidolon, the Giant Space Chicken at the next Santa Rosa meetup for Science Fiction/San Francisco fans on August 5 at Mysterious Futures Bookstore. Six attended the first meetup.

Wu will also be a guest at the Los Angeles Science Fantasy Society in North Hollywood on Thursday, August 9. He’ll be showing Guidolon with another independent short, Haunted Planet.

Preston, Paul, Liz and Terra, four of the six attendees of the first Science Fiction/San Francisco meetup in Santa Rosa.
Wu’s latest project has also attracted the attention of the folks at Boing Boing: http://www.boingboing.net/2007/07/09/frank_wus_guidolont.html.

Sometime Bay Area Fan and BASFA member Cheryl Morgan was guest of honor in July at Finncon, the largest fan convention in Finland. Among her many accomplishments, Morgan won the Hugo Award in 2004 for her much-missed fanzine Emerald City.

Yahoo Underground continues to mine last year’s World Science Fiction Convention for items; Bay Area Fan Kevin Roche recently was featured: http://underground.yahoo.com/blogpost/425/aq:WorldCon/.

Club News

The Bay Area Science Fiction Association, which has been meeting weekly in Campbell for several years, is changing meeting location after the restaurant where the group had been meeting decided to close an hour earlier on Monday nights. The group is meeting at different locations until they find a new permanent home.

Convention News

July’s Sac-Anime has come and gone. The reviews of this gate show are very mixed. I personally thought that the hotel was a poor choice for a convention venue, but I did think the video programing was very up-to-date.

Anime Los Angeles head Chaz Boston Baden has a trip report on his visit to Sac-Anime on his blog at: http://hazelchaz.livejournal.com/94985.html#cutid1.

Moira Hahn has been announced as guest of honor at this year’s convention.

The fifth Japan Town Anime Faire will not be held in Japan Town following a move to San Francisco’s Fort Mason Center this year. The convention will be held on November 10-11. Pre-registration is $32 until October 31 and will be $35 at the door. Guests of Honor will be akai SKY, Quarter Circle, Stephanie Yanez, The Shogunate, Eurobeat King and Alex Shen.

Events will include video gaming, an exhibit hall, a video room, costume contest, live performances, panels and anime bingo.

They seem to be having some trouble with their website, but try: http://www.project760.net/ita/forms/ or www.myspace.com/jtaf.

According to Alan Rosenthal, “the rumors of a Ditto revival are true. We will be combining Ditto with ArtCon this year in order to celebrate Art Widner’s 90th birthday in grand style.” The event will be held October 26-28 in Gualala. Tickets are $30 before September 30 or $40 at the door.

Art Winder is better known to fanzinistas as “R” Twidner. Ditto is a fanzine fan convention.

Checks should be made out to Alan Rosenthal and sent to P.O. Box 75684, Seattle, WA 98175-0684.

Further Confusion has released their July newsletter at: http://community.livejournal.com/furcon/197370.html#cutid1.

Items include information on the summer picnic and camp out; the news that the Doubletree is sold out the Friday, Saturday and Sunday of the convention but overflow hotel space is still available; and new guest announcements.

Moira Hahn has been announced as guest of honor at this year’s convention.

The display board outside of Japan Video in San Francisco’s Japantown has been updated with this year’s pictures of cosplayers who took part in the Cherry Blossom Festival last spring.

Writer’s Group News

There’s a couple of new writers’ groups forming for prospective genre fiction authors.

According to a flier that’s making the rounds, there’s a new science fiction readers and writers group forming. Here’s the info:

“Love to read or write science fiction? Want to get published or devour never before seen SF? Meet or correspond with other science fiction writers and readers weekly for constructive criticism sessions and to discuss outlets for publication. Possible annual magazine published.

“Contact: LaurenAddress@hotmail.com

“Include name, and some science fiction themes you enjoy.”

The Creative Writers of Marin met Tuesday, July 24 at the café in Borders Bookstore in San Rafael. The organizer is interested in fantasy, sci fi, poetry and paranormal romance. This group is using www.meetup.com to organize their events.

Bookstore News

Kinokuniya Bookstore in San Francisco’s Japantown is remodeling some office space downstairs from their existing space to provide a 2,000 square foot display area dedicated to anime, manga and Japanese pop culture goods.

The expansion is expected to open sometime in August after construction to connect the current second floor space with the new area. Manga and anime now account for up to 15 percent of the Kinokuniya’s sales.

The Kamikaze Pop store located in the Santa Rosa Plaza Mall has closed. The kiosk-style store that specialized in anime and manga goods had been open less than a year. The store may reopen in another Bay Area location.

Santa Rosa’s Lakeside Books has closed following the death of the store’s owner. The store had a small science fiction section.

Anime and Managa News

The July 12-18 issue of the Nichi Bei Times, a San Francisco newspaper for the Japanese and Japanese American community, contains a nine-page special section on anime and manga. It includes articles on local artists, the Blast Off! event at the Asian Art Museum, the Yoshitoshi and Tezuka exhibits at the Asian Art Museum, cosplay, the Banzai/Godzilla exhibit at Fort Mason Center, and maid cafes in Japan. It includes reviews of manga as well as a list of anime and manga related stores in San Francisco’s Japantown.

The paper is available in Japantown or at the website at www.nichibeitimes.com.

In the supplement, Nichi Bei Times announced the winners of its recent manga art contest. First place went to Tony Foti of San Jose, second place: Fionna Tam of San Leandro, third place: Meiko Kikuto of San Francisco with honorable mention going to Tracey MacCorkindale of Arlington, Texas.

Winners will receive versions of e frontier’s Manga Studio software.

Film Festivals

The schedule for the 2007 Dead Channels Festival of Fantastic Film is up at http://www.deadchannels.com/schedule.php

Some movies don’t have descriptions up yet, but at least we know what’s playing. The festival will be held at the Roxie New College Film Center in San Francisco on Friday, August 10 through Thursday August 16.

Films in the program with fantasy content include The Great Yokai War which will play August 17 as a double feature with Ichi The Killer. The later is based on a manga and has an anime sequel, although it’s more of a gore/yakuza film than a fantasy.

There’s also going to be a 10th Asian Film Festival in November at the theater, but the schedule is not yet available.

Music News

Sacramento-based Star Trek band Warp 11 will open for actor George Takei at an evening Creation Con concert September 28 in Sacramento. The rock band also has a new album out and will be playing a gig at the 12 Galaxies in San Francisco. For more information go to www.warp11.com.

Theater News

San Francisco’s Black Box Theatre’s podcast of their adaptation of Mary Shelley’s Frankenstein is now available on the theater’s website for free. The recording was made as part of last year’s Free Night of Theater 2006. The recording can be heard at: http://www.blackboxtheatre.com.

SF Theater Festival is Light on S/F

It seems that every year, the San Francisco Theater Festival has fewer and fewer acts that are speculative fiction.

This year the free event, held July 22 at Yerba Buena Gardens in San Francisco, had almost none, although I couldn’t see every act and some sf might have slipped past me.

The most sf of all the acts I saw was the Atmos Theatre’s sampling of their upcoming presentation of “A Midsummer Night’s Dream.” Constrained by the half hour limit on performances, the group excerpted a story line with Oberon and Puck causing mischief to the two main romantic couples through the use of magic.

This was well done and well acted, although the actors sometimes did not speak loudly enough to overcome the noise from neighboring plays, passing helicopters and noisy sea gulls.

Atmos Theater is putting on the full version of the play in the middle of a redwood forest in Woodside through September 2. (See the Calendar for details.)

After that, it was off to see “Pirate Tenaya Plunders Europe.” And when she says she’s after booty, it’s not pirate booty that she’s after.

What can I say about Tenaya? Earnest, innocent, painfully naive. With lyrics of her own set to songs from popular musicals, she tells the story of the months she spent traveling Europe on her own, making sure she nails at least one guy from every country she visits.

Somehow music from Disney just doesn’t mesh well with songs about getting stoned in Amsterdam and seeing the Red Light District. Maybe it’s just me.

The best performance I saw was “Venus Christ,” despite the long, long, interpretive dance sequence in the middle.

I enjoyed the music, a funk-oriented rock blend of various traditional musical styles, and the lead singer was quite talented. I liked her cigar-chomping, bombastic style that borrowed elements from syncretic Caribbean religious rites, the more theatrical of modern Christian traditions and touches of Jim Morrison’s stage persona and “Jesus Christ Superstar.”

The piece opened up with the lead signer invoking the feminine spirits and all that pseudo-religious Earth Mother mumbo jumbo. This was a pean to hippie-style feminist empowerment raised to a religious fervor,
Manga Mini-Con at the Asian Art Museum

By Jack Avery

It’s always fascinating to see a non-traditional, non-fan organization put together a convention. So much of fandom and the way we do fan events is based entirely on tradition. Even if a modern con organizer has never heard of the 1939 Worldcon, they end up following similar templates that have been passed down by fans through the years. Either that or they react against those templates.

Which is why it’s so neat to see what people from outside that tradition come up with.

Case in point was the Blast Off! event held July 7 at the Asian Art Museum as part of their ongoing Tezuka: The Marvel of Manga special exhibit.

While it contained some elements borrowed from traditional anime conventions, such as a cosplay contest, it also drew from a very different perspective coming from the art and museum community.

The event seemed aimed at a younger, family audience with a general background rather than the hard-core anime and manga fan base.

Instead of panels, for example, they had a series of lectures. There was a series of performances in a large open performance space. There was no dealer’s area, but there were lots of hands-on demonstrations and art activities.

And one heck of an art exhibit.

One difference from typical fan-run conventions that I really liked was the registration system. Instead of mucking about with name badges and forms, you paid your money and got a ticket with a little label that you affixed to your clothing to prove you had paid. There were no lines to get in and the system worked well because of its simplicity. Unlike at many cons, the admissions department ran smoothly and had the authority to deal with issues on the spot with a focus on customer service rather than bureaucracy.

Opening ceremonies included a performance by Gen Taiko. Very good, although I don’t know much about Taiko. It was very loud and energetic and a good way to start the event.

After enjoying the Taiko performance, I took a quick look around at the manga lounge. This wasn’t a fan lounge like at a normal con, it was more of an exhibit space with examples of manga and anime culture including a platform made up as a “typical” anime fan’s bedroom.

One interesting area was the hands-on demonstrations. These included a gaming and comic book demonstration with Derek Yu and Anthony Wu, a hands-on printmaking demonstration with Hellen Jo and a Dojinshi demonstration with Jing Bentley and Mark Miyake. This area also had large sheets of paper hung up so that attendees could draw their own art. This was also the area where the Manga drawing contest was held.

I stuck my head in the door for Fred Schodt and Gilles Poitras lecture on manga and anime. This was a lecture aimed at a general audience that gave an overview of the history as well as current trends in anime and manga.

Like all cons, there were often too many things happening at the same time, although the various programming tracks were kept mostly separate. There was a lecture track in one of the museum’s education rooms, a performance track held in a large upstairs gallery, and a hands-on art track.

In addition, when attendees didn’t have an event they wanted to see, they could take in both the Tezuka exhibit and the neighboring exhibit, Yoshitoshi’s Strange Tales: Woodblock Prints from Edo to Meiji.

In addition to binders with descriptions of Tezuka’s work, there were docent-led tours through the exhibit, including tours led by teens for teens.

There was a break in the activities I wanted to see, so I took in the Tezuka exhibit. It was amazing and well worth seeing. The exhibit contained both enlarged facsimiles of pages from a number of Tezuka works as well as pages of original comic art and covers. The choices ranged the whole of Tezuka’s lengthy career and covered a number of different genres.

Also amazing was the Yoshitoshi exhibit. These wood block prints are simply stunning. The two exhibits really go well together and play off of each other.

The museum wanted to show the history of Japanese art as it transformed from traditional forms into modern manga, according to Rui Sasaki, a member of the curatorial department.

I missed the Natsu Onoda performance of Tezuka’s “Okina Mori no Monogatari” (Story of a Big Forest), which I really wanted to see, because it was scheduled at the same time as an excellent lecture on the history of Japanese pop art from Meiji era woodblocks to manga.

That lecture, by artist Marco Marinucci, really showed the strengths of having a museum backing the event. Marinucci was an excellent lecturer, relating the history of wood block printing, its cultural significance and its relation to later manga publishing.

Much of his lecture used Yoshitoshi’s work and life as a basis for explaining the wood block print industry and the art of traditional Japanese wood block prints. He described how the prints, now viewed as fine art, were originally meant for mass consumption. He did a good job of describing how wood block printing changed with the times and how it related to Japanese culture and history. There was a lot of information on Yoshitoshi that really enhanced the exhibit and brought Yoshitoshi’s time and work to life.

Following that on the lecture track was Kelly Haines cosplay and dolflie lecture. It was weighted more heavily toward the Asian ball-jointed doll side of things, as might be expected for the chair of next year’s DOLLECTABLE ABJD convention. I was surprised that there weren’t more cosplayers there, but it was still a good

The third and final registered entry played a villain from the “Naruto” series.

Walk-ons included “L finds the Death Note,” a Misa, also from “Death Note,” and a girl who came as a box of Pocky (the signature anime fan snack), reprising her Halloween costume from last year.

All six entries were awarded a prize. Sailor Moon and Luna took first place, Pocky took second, Naruto villain was in third, Chado was fourth, Misa was fifth and L was sixth.

After the contest it was back to finish looking at the Yoshitoshi exhibit. I got so caught up that I missed the first part of Ramen and Rice’s concert.
They were wonderful as usual. Ramen and Rice were the only two cosplayers that I recognized and they were in “civilian” clothes.

The popular violin and cello duo played to an appreciative crowd of more than 100 in the second floor performance area. The duo are quite good musicians and exhibited a range of bow techniques.

They seemed to take the performance more soberly than usual. The duo usually performs at conventions, often busking in the hallways for tips to offset the cost of attending the convention, although lately they have become invited performers drawing a steady audience.

Among the pieces played were a selection of themes from Naruto, Oran Host Club, the opening theme to the Kingdom Hearts game, three pieces from Samurai X, the main theme from Inuyasha and “On That Day” from the “Spirited Away” soundtrack.

Particularly lovely was Ashitaka’s Theme from Mononoke Hime.

Styles ranged from neo-classical to the rock “Ready, Steady, Go” cover from the American version of Full Metal Alchemist. They finished with a medley from classic Nintendo video games.

One area that was similar to that of a regular convention was the game room where Dance Dance Revolution was set up for attendees to play.

After the performance, I sat down to watch one of the two movies on Tezuka that were playing, but it was time for the museum to close and I was shooed out the door. No late-night bull sessions in the con suite here.

That’s one thing I did miss, a con suite. But it’s unusual for anime cons to have con suites, so it wasn’t really an oversight.

For those who missed the Blast Off! event, there’s still time to take in the Tezuka and Yoshitoshi exhibits, the storytelling scrolls display and the manga lounge and Tezuka films. The museum also offers several other events related to the Tezuka event coming up.

And even those who did attend the event can return to see the second rotation of prints in the Yoshitoshi exhibit that didn’t go on display until the following week.

Japanese pop culture has become trendy in the Western art world, and for good reason: the Japanese are doing some very interesting things with their art.

The Banzai/Godzilla: Japanese Influences in American Culture Then and Now exhibition at the San Francisco Museum of Modern Art’s Artist Gallery at Fort Mason Center offered an example of this trendiness gone wrong.

The show was supposed to showcase artists that had been influenced by classical Japanese motifs and styles (the “Banzai” part of the exhibit) and those influenced by manga and anime culture (the “Godzilla” part). But this ended up being a showcase of minimalism in the former and an insufficient commitment to the source in the later.

There were some good pieces: Howard Munson’s work is technically well done, visually appealing and actually on-topic. Munson, who creates hand-crafted books as works of art, had two pieces in the show.

The first of these was the most “manga” of any of the works presented. He built a book that opens to reveal that the pages are a folded scroll of paper that cascades down the piece, evoking traditional Asian storytelling scrolls. Tumbling down the page like a waterfall are little rectangular cutout panels of manga images with similarly-shaped black boxes. This has the sense of movement and linear time inherent in sequential art while separating it from the need to tell a story. He’s taken the physical form of manga, as well as the way it’s packaged, and converted it into pure art.

His second work in the show was also a book, this time a pop-up book that exploded the traditionally two-dimensional form of manga into three dimensions.

Artist Scott Tsuchitani’s work is also clearly connected to Japanese pop culture. He takes wartime photos of Japanese children and superimposes pop culture figures onto them. In one, Astroboy and Ultraman stare forlornly from behind the barbed wire of an internment camp. At least I think it’s a U.S. internment camp; there’s no information as to where the photos derive from.

The sculptures of Tomoko Nakazato strongly echo the work of current Japanese pop artists who combine psychedelic or bizarre imagery with cute child-like figures.

Another artist, Kathy Aoki, produces sheep drawn from Japanese “Kawaii” or “cute” culture.

But sadly, these were the few standout artists in the show. The remaining parts of the Godzilla half of the show just didn’t seem to have any connection to manga or anime. The Banzai part was just minimalist. One of these sculptures was a wooden post with some junk sitting on it, topped by a plain rock. Hasn’t the art community moved beyond calling a pile of refuse “art?” I suppose not.

Another problem I had with the exhibit was a lack of context and information. It was sometimes unclear where the work of one artist left off and another began, and there was no information or title posted by the artwork. Instead you had to cross reference a number with the exhibit catalog located at the front of the exhibit to find a piece’s title.

The exhibit ended on July 27. If you didn’t make it out there to see it, you didn’t miss a whole lot.
Meeting 885

July 18, 2007

Meeting 885 of the Bay Area Science Fiction Association was held in the w/a/l/k-i-n/ f/r/e/e/z/e/r/ meeting room of the Round Table Pizza, Milpitas CA. The meeting was called to order on July 18, 2007 at 8:04 p.m., President Trey Haddad presiding and President Emeritus, etc. Kevin Standlee acting as Secretary. At least 17 people attended. Officers absent: Secretary Barbara Johnson-Haddad.

Previous minutes:
The minutes of meeting 884 were adopted as "Shaken, not stirred." The minutes of meeting 883 are still pending because Mr. Standlee didn't think to print out a copy.

Officer Reports

Treasurer's report:
Last week the general fund collected $15.31, bringing the total to $9,900.81. The Party Fund, bolstered by the AwahneeCon surplus, took in $115.82, for a total of $590.81. The Treasurer noted that the Party Fund total does not include any expenses from Westercon.

The notice for the money motion to be voted next week is in the mail.

Vice President:
There will be a new issue of The Drink Tank and of SF/SF soon.

President:
The president introduced a new member who joined at Westercon, but whose name the Acting Secretary neglected to record.

Committees:
The Party Committee reports that it has enough money to be able to hold two nights of parties (Friday, Saturday) at Con-X-Treme.

Chris Garcia reported that the Fanzine Committee is working on the new incarnation of the clubzine - to be titled The BASFA Times - but needs content. Contact him if you can provide some.

Dave Gallaher reported that the Site Selection Committee had secured a site for the Monday, July 30 meeting: Giovanni's Pizza in Sunnyvale. He will post the rest of the test sites and dates soon, probably by next Monday.

Business:
There was no business.

Announcements:
David W. Clark announced the recent death of Bay Area "founding fan" Clifton Amsbury.

Mr. Clark announced that he now has a Wikipedia entry, and produced as evidence the listing for David Worth Clark, an Idaho senator who died in 1955.

Reviews:
Chris Garcia reviewed the new Harry Potter movie as a good place to go when your foot hurts and worth full price. There were numerous follow-ons, including "Read the book first," and "The least accessible of the movies to date."

Chris also reviewed a "preview copy" of the final Potter novel: "Wow."

Chris reviewed the St. George's Spirits Open House: Food, chocolate, and especially the liquor all great. Worth full price including the bottle he bought.

David W. Clark reviewed an example of the kind of junk mail he gets as a bookseller, specifically material trying to get him to stock The Tomb of the Devils (wretched self-published dreck). Hilarity followed as he provided examples of the book's illiterate and ungrammatical official description on Amazon.com.

Mr. Clark reviewed Buzz Cola (purchased at the Kwik-E-Mart) as "It's nice, but doesn't have the complexity of Coca-Cola or Pepsi. Not as good as Jolt Cola. Flat aftertaste redolent of too much caffeine." Mr. Garcia followed up by saying it was refreshing when chilled to -40 degrees.

David Gallaher reviewed the International Chocolate Salon at Fort Mason this past weekend. More than thirty chocolatiers were at the event. He's still on a sugar high, and it was very much worth the $20 tickets.

Adrienne Foster reviewed epinions.com's "Community Day," which was a day when lots of the site's members were encouraged to gather at a number of regional events. She said that at least a dozen attended the event in San Francisco, including her, and that it was worth dining out on epinion's money.

Joanie reviewed Elsewhere, a young adult novel as "sort of comforting and pleasant, but a horrible idea. Not worth reading for the sake of your job."
Auctions:
A vast pile of books appeared on the table. The Treasurer conducted a "Dutch Auction" for the right to take away lots of ten at a time, the highest bidders getting earliest choice. When the written bids were unsealed, the winners paid $10 + $3.75 + $3 + $2.25 + $1 + $0.25 = $20.25 and there was only an empty cardboard box left under the table, which Mr. Garcia reclaimed.

Rumor of the Week:
The rumor of the week was "It's hard to write when your fingers are frozen."

The meeting adjourned at approximately 9:20 p.m.

Acting Secretary

Meeting 886

July 25, 2007

Meeting 886 of the Bay Area Science Fiction Association was held in the meeting room of the Round Table Pizza, Milpitas CA. The meeting was called to order on July 25, 2007 at 8:01 p.m., Vice President Chris Garcia presiding and President Emeritus, etc. Kevin Standlee acting as Secretary. More than 20 people attended – the Emergency Holographic Secretary forgot to count. Officers absent: President Trey Haddad, Secretary Barbara Johnson-Haddad.

On a motion by David Clark, a “Bob Wilkins” Jar was established.

On a motion by Evil Kevin, a Party Jar was established.

Officer Reports:

President:
Trey and Barbara have been called out of town unexpectedly and send their regrets. They will be gone through August 5.

Treasurer’s report:
Last week the general fund collected $4.19, bringing the total to $9,905. The Party Fund took in $19.75, for a total of $610.56. The Treasurer noted that the Party Fund total does not include any expenses from Westercon. Of the $9,900, only about $800 is readily available for spending; the remainder being tied up in certificates of deposit and in maintaining a minimum balance to avoid service charges.

Vice President:
The Vice President, with the consent of the meeting, jumped forward to the two Money Motions.

As the Vice President had to leave the room for a few minutes, Andy Trembley assumed the Chair. The Treasurer read the meeting notice with the money motions. The VP resumed the Chair.

Money Motions:
Per BASFA rules, motions to spend the club’s money have to be announced in advance with a postcard mailing to all registered members. Only registered BASFA members may vote. BASFA’s “Chicago-style” voting is not allowed, nor are proxies. Members may vote only once on each issue. A motion to spend money may be amended to spend less (but not more) than the amount originally proposed in the meeting notice.

Money Motion #1: Kaja Foglio
The meeting entertained a motion on behalf of Mr. Haddad, as summarized in the notice of this meeting:
Resolved, That the Bay Area Science Fiction Association grants $___ to Kaja and Phil Foglio to assist in the payment of extraordinary medical expenses.

It was explained that Kaja went into the hospital with a flare-up of Crohn’s disease. There was further discussion of how much liquid cash we have. The Treasurer has discretion on when to actually pay out grants based on when our certificates of deposit are due.

There was discussion of how much money to fill the blank with. This being a motion to spend money, we will start with $1,000 (the amount in the meeting call, and thus the largest amount we’re allowed to spend) and work downward in $100 increments.

There was explanation of the Foglios’ finances and how much perceived need. While the Foglios do have health insurance, they have co-payments and deductibles regarding an expensive hospital stay. Members asked about precedent: BASFA has donated money to fannish individuals with health problems; the Treasurer said that such payments have been in the neighborhood of $300. Unfortunately, the motion’s original maker was unable to attend tonight, and we do not have a lot of information about the specific need.

There was considerable, spirited debate about the club’s finances, the Foglios’ financial need, and related issues.

Adrienne Foster asked if we could postpone the motion until next week. This would effectively kill the motion because we’d then have to restart the notice procedure from scratch. (She did not move a postponement.)

There was more discussion of how the club’s treasury is arranged. The Chair of the Party Committee asked if we could take money from the Party Fund. The ruling was “No; the Party Fund is dedicated to holding BASFA parties, so we can’t divert it to other purposes.”

There was a concern expressed that the club shouldn’t be jointly making charitable decisions, and that individuals should donate money individually. Other members said that the club can spend money the way the club decides, and that might include spending it on charitable purposes.

After debate, values to fill the blank were considered, starting with the largest amount and working downward in $100 increments. Eventually the blank was filled with $500, and the motion with $500 in the blank passed on a counted show of hands, 16-4.

The Treasurer will pay this out as our cash flow allows. If anyone wants to piggyback additional donations on top of the club’s donation, see the Treasurer.

Money Motion #2: Bob Wilkins

Mr. David Clark introduced a resolution, as summarized in the notice of this meeting:

Whereas, Bob Wilkins influenced a vast number of science fiction and fantasy fans in Northern California over a period of more than thirty years; and

Whereas, Bob Wilkins is now suffering from Alzheimer’s disease; and

Whereas, BASFA would like to extend its appreciation to Bob Wilkins for his many years of service to the field; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Bay Area Science Fiction Association grants $300 to the Alzheimer’s Aid Society of Northern California for the care of Bob Wilkins.

Mr. Clark explained the reasoning behind the resolution, and the importance of Bob Wilkins to Bay Area fandom. There are members of BASFA who found fandom thanks to Wilkins putting Jerry Jacks on Creature Features back in the 1970s to talk about an upcoming Westercon. Mr. Clark said that Wilkins was one of the most unifying factors in Bay Area fandom of the 1970s and 1980s. Now that Wilkins is suffering from Alzheimer’s and his family has asked for donations for his care, this would be a good way for us to show our appreciation of what he’s done.

There were again arguments that the club should not be spending club money on acts of private charity.

In response to questions, Mr. Clark reiterated that Wilkins’s family is soliciting donations for his care, and that they’ve asked for the aid to be to the Alzheimer’s Aid Society and specifically for Bob Wilkins’s care. This is not a donation to research on Alzheimer’s, but a specific donation to care for a specific person.

There were several more arguments for and against the motion, including one by proxy that the club should not be spending money on people who aren’t even members of the club.

The question was called (>2/3 vote to close debate). The resolution passed on a vote by show of hands, 17-2. As with the Kaja Foglio motion, any persons wishing to piggyback donations onto the Bob Wilkins donation should see the Treasurer.

On a motion by Mr. Gallaher, a “Kaja Foglio Jar” was established. There now being four jars in the room, the Treasurer did a little song-and-dance to explain which jar was which and how to donate to them.

Previous Minutes:

While a motion to approve the minutes of meeting 885 was under consideration with a pending amendment, Julie Porter moved to suspend the rules and go straight to Auctions. On a >2/3 vote, the rules were suspended and the meeting jumped to Auctions. (The motion to approve the minutes of meeting 885 was implicitly laid on the table by this action.)

Auctions:

There was a huge pile of auction material. The Secretary made no effort to attempt to keep track of the specific material. Many auctions were committed.

Julie Porter’s long-delayed birthday auction was finally held; she eventually sold for $15.

Previous Minutes:

As the meeting returned to considering the minutes of meeting 885, there was a motion to adjourn. Before putting the question on adjournment, the Vice President asked the Site Selection Committee to report, because otherwise a lot of members might not realize where we are meeting next week.

Committees:

Dave Gallaher reported that the Site Selection Committee had secured sites for the next three meetings:

Monday, July 30 – Giovanni’s Pizzeria, 1127 N. Lawrence Expressway, Sunnyvale
Monday, August 6 – Coco’s, 1206 Oakmead Parkway (at Lawrence Expressway), Sunnyvale

Monday, August 13 – Round Table Pizza, 5544 Thornton Avenue, Newark

Adjournment:
On a vote of 11-5, the meeting adjourned at 9:39 p.m.

smaller than them, but they do have the ability to eat a lot of the stuff that’s lower on the food chain and force other creatures out. I only mention this because it’s obvious that they’re on their way to taking over and we’ll need to teach them fannish ways. Sooner or later, a squid will chair a con and we need to make sure it understands how we do things.

The program had advertised that this performance was going to invoke female mythological characters, which sounded sf enough to interest me. I was all ready to see Medusa, Lilith, Circe, Boudica, etc. but unless these were invoked by the interpretive dance sequence, I didn’t catch them. Aside from the musicians and the lead singer, the stage was occupied by a dancer who played the role of Venus Christ in front of a crucifix and a young girl who performed an empowerment rap.
